Times News Services

WINNIPEG — Dissident members of the Brotherhood of Railway Engineers here today voted to return to work and join the 4,000 union members elsewhere in Canada who already have gone back to their jobs.

Rains Favor Rebellious Bengalis

NEW DELHI (Reuters) — Heavy rain fell in East Pakistan today in a break in the weather which could mark a turning point in favor of the rebellious Bengalis struggling against the West Pakistan army to create an independent East Pakistan.

It has been widely predicted that the Pakistani army in the Eastern region could find itself in great difficulty when the monsoon season begins in about a month and unleashes its usual 200 inches of rain in parts of East Pakistan.

The rains began Monday and by dusk they had grounded the Pakistani air force and forced troops to stay in their barracks, the Press Trust of India said.

NEW SUCCESSES

The Bangla Desh (Bengali nation) "liberation forces" claimed new successes Monday, while the official Pakistani radio tacitly admitted that martial law authorities in the country's Eastern wing have been facing difficulties.

PTI, quoting reports reaching Calcutta, said the rebels regained control of the important jute town of Rangpur in the north of East Pakistan after heavy fighting.

The followers of Sheikh Mujibur Rahman were reported to have used "human sea" tactics in Rangpur, and casualties on both sides in two days of fighting were described as heavy.

Blister fighting was also raging in Dinajpur, Kushtia

The 280-member union local that represents engineers employed here by the CNR reached the decision at a meeting in a hotel in neighboring St. Boniface.

Meanwhile, many of those who went back to work elsewhere after a contract settlement with Canada's two major railways emphasized that they were doing so only "under protest."

RATIFICATION

Their complaint was against the system of ratification agreed upon by union negotiators with CP Rail and the CNR. The parties announced agreement Monday in Montreal.

Passenger service was back to normal in most regions of Canada today. The CNR's Supercontinental left Montreal at 3 p.m. Monday on its trip to Vancouver. Its eastbound Supercontinental left Winnipeg at mid-morning on schedule with supervisory personnel handling jobs normally done by engineers.

One of the main worries in Western Canada, primarily the Prairies, was the delay of crucial grain shipments.

Monday night, however, Wheat Pool spokesmen in Vancouver said they expected wheat loading to be back to normal in two days. Ten ships were waiting to load and six more were partially loaded.

HIT OTHER INDUSTRIES

There also was the problem of thousands of people not employed by the railways being laid off because their companies depended on CP Rail and CNR to move stocks before they piled up.

About 2,500 workers laid off by the Northern Interior Lumbermen's Association in the Prince George area of B.C. are expected back within 10 days and many smaller

Colombo Terrorists Repulsed

COLOMBO, Ceylon (AP) — Prime Minister Sirimavo Bandaranaike said today her government had foiled an attempt by insurgents to take over Colombo.

In a radio announcement Ceylon's woman premier said troops had been deployed throughout the island as "Che Guevara" insurgents launched a series of attacks on police stations, security patrols and government buildings.

Mrs. Bandaranaike said that a total of 25 attacks had been repulsed.

There were a few casualties among police and service personnel, while casualties among the terrorist attackers were considerable, she said.

The insurgents commandeered buses for the attacks and used homemade bombs and firearms, the premier announced.

Several arrests were made and a dusk-to-dawn curfew was imposed throughout the country. All schools and universities were closed.

VOLUNTEERS
Ceylon army volunteers were called up to strengthen security forces.

Mrs. Bandaranaike said power supplies, rail and communication links in parts of

Khe Sanh Abandoned

QUANG TRI (Reuters) — U.S. and South Vietnamese troops today blew up their bunkers at Khe Sanh and abandoned the big base from which Saigon's forces attacked the Ho Chi Minh trail in southern Laos.

The last convoy from Khe Sanh, including about 300 American troops and some South Vietnamese, rolled east this morning on Highway 9, the twisting old road which was rebuilt in early February when U.S. forces returned to the former marine base.

Some of the last Americans and South Vietnamese were brought out from Khe Sanh by helicopter just before the final convoy left.

Probe Starts

ROME (UPI) — Health Minister Luigi Mariotti sent two inspectors to Milan today to investigate a newspaper report that medical researchers tested possible harmful effects of an insecticide on 44 new-born babies. "For the time being I have no information and I cannot comment," Mariotti said. "The inspectors will carry out an accurate investigation and report back in four or five days I should be in a position to act."

Dayan 'Prefers War'

JERUSALEM (Reuters) — Differences between Israel and the Arab states were sharpened today following a blunt statement from Defence Minister Moshe Dayan that he would prefer war to an Israeli withdrawal behind pre-1967 borders.

"If the choice is withdrawal to the pre-1967 day war borders or war, as it is said to be by our Arab neighbors, I would prefer not to withdraw," Dayan said Monday night. "War along the present line would be preferable."

He told a political meeting that there must be a real will for peace not only among the Arab leaders but among the intellectuals and in the press and on the radio.

"I haven't noticed any such revolution in their thinking," he said. "Their leaders may be ready to sign a piece of paper, but they have not become ready for a real peace. What they want is the withdrawal of the Israeli army."

HAS TWO STAGES

"What we want is not only a piece of paper, but security. The Israeli defence forces must hold a really defensible line."

Kosygin Offers Peace, Progress As New Goals

Military Might Continues

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Alexei Kosygin offered the Soviet people an economic plan for "peace and progress" today but said the armed forces also must be expanded to balance the threat of "American imperialism."

While promising to spend "vast" sums to make more food and other consumer goods available, he warned that "tension and the threat of war continue in the world."

"We have no right to forget—even for a minute—the need to strengthen our armed forces and maintain their high combat preparedness," the premier told the Soviet Communist party's 24th congress.

"The American imperialists are trampling on international law by waging a disgraceful, dirty bandit war in Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos, and are helping the aggressors in the Middle East."

"The new five-year plan will ensure the further consolidation of the defence capability of our state."

At the same time, he said, Soviet life will become "more prosperous, and spiritually more meaningful and interesting."

Kosygin said the guidelines for economic growth in the next five years give more attention to the consumer than ever before.

HEART FAILURE early today claimed life of King Hussein, 88, one of the most influential monarchs of this century. See story on Page 24.

Ultimatum Given

AMMAN (UPI) — King Hussein gave Palestinian guerrillas a 48-hour ultimatum tonight to get their weapons out of Amman by Thursday. If they do not, he said, "the result will be cruel."

Hussein spoke to a gathering of Jordanian professional men following 12 days of fighting between his troops and the guerrilla forces. Most of the fighting was in north Jordan near the Syrian border but there have been clashes in Amman itself.

The guerrillas reported heavy fighting today in the Jerash sector 25 miles north of Amman but a UPI correspondent who reached the guerrilla base there today said all was quiet.

Washington Protesters Arrested

Times News Services

Protest marches were held both in New York and Washington Monday and in the case of the Washington demonstration 92 persons were arrested. Both had an anti-war theme.

At New York an estimated 4,000 protesters staged a noisy but peaceful demonstration in Wall Street in the start of a "spring offensive" that will culminate in Washington April 24 to May 5.

Singing "We Shall Overcome" and chanting slogans such as "Big Companies Get Rich; GIs Die" several hundred demonstrators led by officials of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference marched 2½ miles down police-lined Broadway to the financial district.

Only incident in the march came shortly after the group reached Wall Street, when construction workers apparently dropped bags of white powder used to coat steel girders. There were no injuries.

At Washington church people representing several denominations were arrested near the White House after they knelt on the sidewalk and spurned police requests that they move on.

Some Civil Servants May Balk at Pay Hike

Civil servants in certain categories may vote against 7 per cent pay increases announced by the provincial government, John Fryer, secretary of the B.C. Government Employees' Union, said Monday.

Fry said the increase still leaves civil servants far behind workers in comparable jobs.

The raises, effective last Thursday, are subject to ratification by the union membership and Fryer feels that majorities in certain classifications will not accept them.

The civil service commission said Monday 24,500 employees will get the raise.

Special increases for hospital employees in a number of categories were included and some will get merit increases within their salary range.

Orderlies, for instance, will get a 10.7 per cent increase with the salary range of $436 to $533 increasing to a range of $506 to $612.

The Clerk 1 category increases 6.5 per cent. Starting salary goes from $292 to $311.

"MAJORITY AT LAST" Premier Ed Schreyer, left, tells an election night crowd of NDP supporters in the riding of St. Vital following two

byelections Monday. NDP candidates won in both giving Schreyer a three-seat majority in the 57-seat legislature. (CP Wirephoto)

Schreyer's NDP Wins Majority

Times News Services

WINNIPEG — Premier Ed Schreyer's NDP government stole two seats from the opposition Monday, giving it a majority in the legislature for the first time since it came to power in June, 1969.

The byelection victories in the greater Winnipeg constituency of St. Vital and in rural St. Rose raised the prospect of cooler days ahead for the torrid Manitoba political scene.

A triumphant Premier Schreyer told cheering party supporters in St. Vital that unless forced into a general election "we will go the full term" thus squelching speculation that he would follow up successful byelection bids with a general election call.

But the premier who has frequently declared he would not call a general election until a four-year term or until he is defeated in the house added:

"If a general election were forced upon us we would win from 40 to 45 seats."

Jim Walding, a 33-year-old politician, won the St. Vital seat with a 290-vote majority over a Liberal challenger. He lost by a narrow margin to a Conservative in 1969. The Conservative member later left the province and resigned his seat.

In St. Rose Pete Adam a 56-year-old rancher and businessman ended 44 years of Liberal domination with his victory. For the last 17 years the Western Manitoba constituency was represented by ex-Liberal leader Gil Molgat whose appointment to the Senate last October created the vacancy.

NO PERMIT, NO PROSECUTION

Pollution Board Admits Loophole

The Pollution Control Board has admitted it cannot take action against a company for pollution spills unless the firm is under permit with the board.

PCB director W. N. Venables made the statement in regard to complaints that Kaiser Resources is dumping millions of gallons of effluent into streams in the East Kootenays.

Effluent containing ammonia, phenols and coal solids has escaped into either Elk River or Michel Creek from three Kaiser facilities. Kaiser, Venables said, has had several applications for permits turned down for various technical and legal reasons.

"It's a ludicrous situation — yes — that is what we have been saying all the time," said Mallard. "You can't blame the pollution branch, as all they can do is to administer the act."

Mallard said the society even offered Lands Minister Ray Williston to send a team of experts to make an ecological survey at Houston, near Smithers, before a pulp mill starts operation.

"The answer was — no," he said. "We asked the company to make a survey. The answer was — no."

He said the study could have been undertaken by university graduates under the federal youth assistance program.

Mallard said the act should be amended obliging a company to make a survey before allowing it to go into operation.

"As things stand now a company can register with the Pollution Control Board, and start operating," he said. "It may take years before the pollution branch can get around to it."

$1 A YEAR FOR 3 ACRES

Cool-Aid Gets Its Soil

Saanich council turned down objections from two residents Monday night and agreed to lease three acres of land to Cool-Aid for transient truck farming.

The land, off Maridham Street in the Colquitz Creek area, will cost the youth group $1 per year. They plan to grow vegetables using the labor of wandering young people, offering food and shelter in return for a day's work in the fields.

William McConnell, 4510 Maridham, warned council that the land was not "viable," and suggested the farm might become a haven for an undesirable element.

"We don't foresee an undesirable element," replied Ald. Alan Newbury. "We foresee a worthwhile project." Newbury is chairman of council's youth committee.

John W. E. Harris, 4542 Maridham, suggested leasing the area for farming might delay eventual development of Quick's Pond as park land, and "we would be doing this group a favor if better land could be found."

"Let the brush and grass grow, and if there are a few old buildings, let them alone or remove and destroy them."

COMMEND EFFORTS

"If this group persists, then I would insist they be good neighbors and expect the lease to be enforced. I would not object to the lease, however, on the grounds that something undesirable might result. I have visited their headquarters, read their proposals and looked over the area in question. I agree in principle with their idea and commend their efforts."

A Cool-Aid spokesman said today the group, under the direction of Rick Stamford, 22, may start turning the soil on their $1 farm this week.

"We have a lot of energy, and we want to be good neighbors," Stamford said.

In other business, council referred to committee a request from the operator of Wooded Wonderland for a long-term lease to permit him to initiate improvements.

Ald. Pettersen said he wanted to install a children's lot, but was reluctant to do so on the basis of the two-year lease he now holds.

Pettersen said the improvements would cost $35,000 over five years, and asked for a five-year lease with an option to renew. He also sought permission to rename the project Beaver Lake Wonderland to take advantage of Beaver Lake.

Council also:

- Rejected out of hand a suggestion by Ald. William Noel that Saanich take the lead in urging B.C. municipalities to protest the ban on liquor advertising imposed by the province.

- Referred back to committee, thus effectively delaying, a proposal to change the name of a section of Raymond Street to Riel Street in honor of the Metis revolutionary.

- Approved a recommendation of the planning committee to tax Swan Lake Creek property owners $12.50 per year to develop the area as parkland.

Reminded Casa Marcia Crescent residents who complained about raw sewage discharging into the sea that at least one of their septic tanks is leaking into a fish pond. Septic tank runoff also is spilling into sewers, causing "noxious odor."

- Approved the Saanich portion of the Victorian Days Marathon, which is expected to draw 1,500 cyclists April 18.

- Referred to committee a request from the Society for Control that the dangers of noise pollution be studied.

"Never have such vast monetary and material resources been allocated for the development of agriculture and industries that manufacture goods for the population," Tass new agency quoted Kosygin as saying.

The Tass summary of the premier's remarks emphasized the concern for the consumer as opposed to the heavy industry sector, which traditionally has been given priority in the Soviet economy.

The draft directives for the 1971-75 economic plan call for the production of consumer goods to increase by 44 to 48 per cent. Heavy industry is to grow by 41 to 45 per cent.

HEAVY INDUSTRY BASIC

Kosygin, known as a proponent of an expansion of consumer goods, conceded that heavy industry "remains the foundation of the Soviet Union's economic might and the future of the people's well-being."

Kosygin listed numerous specific benefits the population can expect before 1975, including:

- Extra financial assistance to families with many children.

- Improvement of working conditions for women.

- Greater increases in salaries, averaging 30 per cent in five years.

- Increases in appropriations for bringing up the younger generations.

The value of industrial output will reach 528,000 million to 544,000 million rubles ($580,000 million to $598,000 million) by 1975, he predicted. He said this would be an increase of 100 per cent in 10 years—or since the ouster of his predecessor, Nikita S. Khrushchev.

PLAN NUCLEAR POWER

"During the coming five years we shall launch a broad program for the building of atomic power stations, chiefly in the European part of the country where the fuel resources are limited," Kosygin said.

He added that the program envisages during the next 10 to 12 years the construction of atomic power stations with a total capacity of 30 million kilowatts.

Touching on the Soviet Union's chronic problem of getting workers to produce their full capacity, Kosygin said:

"It is planned to raise labor productivity in industry by 36-40 per cent as against 32 per cent in the last five-year period. Labor productivity on collective and state farms is to raise by 37-40 per cent, as compared with 35 per cent in 1966-1970."

Kosygin's speech was free of the boasts promises made in the last decade by Khrushchev, who claimed that the Soviet Union would catch up and overtake the United States in industrial production by 1970.

"In the sphere of the economic competition between the two opposite social systems," Kosygin said, "we still have a long and stubborn struggle ahead. We, Communists, are confident of the ultimate outcome of this struggle in the favor of socialism."

called for two stages, the first of which was Israeli withdrawal. The second was variously described by Mohammed Hassanin Heykal, editor of the influential Cairo newspaper Al-Ahram, as "reversing the consequences of the 1967 war" and by President Anwar Sadat of Egypt as "assuring the rights of the Palestinians."

Both meant defeating Israel, Dayan said.

Dayan said control of the Gaza Strip was as important for defending and developing the Negev desert as the Golan Heights were for the defence of Israel's Galilee settlements.

In an earlier speech Foreign Minister Abba Eban said Israel was prepared to consider a separate arrangement for reopening the Suez canal, but he emphasized that this could only be done on a basis of mutual benefit.

the country had been disrupted.

She said the government would not hesitate to hand out drastic punishments and stamp out the insurgency.

Mrs. Bandaranaike announced that the People's Liberation Front, the official title of the Che Guevara organization, had been outlawed.

The cabinet met in emergency session Monday night following an earlier attack on a police station and the imposition of a curfew on some parts of the island.

Mrs. Bandaranaike announced March 7 she had mobilized the armed forces to maintain law and order following a mob attack on the U.S. embassy in Colombo.

March 16, the government declared a state of emergency following police reports of increasing activity by the People's Liberation Front.

HAD COMMUNIST HELP

Mrs. Bandaranaike's Freedom party returned to power in a landslide election victory last May with the Communist party as an ally.

The coalition promised to solve the country's problems by establishing a Socialist society, with priority to be given to the nationalization of foreign banks.

But hoped-for aid from Communist nations has not been forthcoming. 700,000 persons now are unemployed, a budget deficit of $195 million is expected this year, and the Socialist program has been shelved, while the government gets help where it can.

This has made the Communists restless, and their trade union wing has been campaigning for an immediate takeover of the banks and foreign tea and rubber plantations.

Although Mrs. Bandaranaike threw out the U.S. Peace Corps and the Asia Foundation, listing them as imperialist agencies, her government has continued to accept aid from the United States now totalling $20 million a year.

Inmate Denies Escaping

A 34-year-old inmate at Wilkinson Road jail reported missing since early Monday afternoon pleaded not guilty today to a charge of escaping lawful custody.

John Joe Bereczk was serving a six-month sentence for a shoplifting conviction last month in Victoria.

Colwood RCMP said Bereczk was one of a group of inmates clearing brush on the farm at 3898 Metehosin. The farm is used by the prison for supplies.

Police said the accused was missing about 1 p.m. and was found 45 minutes later on Latoria Road.

Bereczk told Ostler today that he was "definitely not guilty" and he could prove it. Ostler remanded the man to April 8 for trial.

firms were expected to reopen their doors today or Wednesday.

In B.C.'s Fraser valley, meanwhile, less than seven hours after freight service was restored, a derailment blocked the CNR line near Matsqui.

A company spokesman said the train—one of the first to resume service after the settlement was announced—was stopped when nine of its 100 cars jumped the track but remained upright.

No injuries were reported and the cause was not known.

FIREHALL FREEDOM MOVE DISMISSED

Sidney council's move to administer an independent fire department was dismissed as "incomprehensible" at a North Saanich council Monday.

A copy of the resolution adopted by Sidney two weeks ago empowering the fire wardens committee to take over administration of Sidney fire protection was described by Ald. Trevor Davis as "a remarkable example of legislation written in the absence of an informed citizen."

Sidney and North Saanich have operated a joint fire department.

Meanwhile, a new $30,000 fire engine is on its way to the new North Saanich firehall in Deep Cove, driven from Quebec by volunteers George Hartshorne and Ron Evans.

Ald. George Aylard, North Saanich fire committee chairman, reported that 18 volunteers are being trained.

C. Saanich Sets the Date For $900,000 Ballot

Central Saanich council Monday set April 24 as the date for its $900,000 sewer referendum.

Residents of Brentwood, Saanichton and Turgoe Point will vote on the system which would be installed in those areas only.

Polling stations will be at Brentwood Elementary and Central Saanich municipal hall. Advanced polls will be on April 22 and 23 in the municipal hall between 2 and 5 p.m.

Horses and hikers do not mix, council decided.

Jill Yonge on behalf of local horsemen wrote to council asking for permission to use the Hagen Creek trail in Centennial Park, recently cleared by Mount Newton Secondary students.

But council decided to keep it for pedestrians only, but will permit the riders to clear a two-mile route around the perimeter of the park.

Motorcyclists will be banned from both trails.

Council will apply today for federal funds to provide summer employment for 33 youths.

A plan outlined by Ald. Ted Cayard listed $52,000 in parks and public works projects which can be carried out in July and August under the opportunities for youth program.

Fratricide Charged

A Langford man was remanded in custody for psychiatric examination after he appeared in Campbell River Monday afternoon charged with the non-capital murder of his brother March 21.

Calvin Arthur Steinberger, 21, of 256 Atkins Road, was arrested in Victoria Sunday night and taken to Campbell River. Gold River RCMP said there was no difficulty encountered in the arrest.

He was charged in the death of his brother, Donald Steinberger, 26, also formerly of Langford, who died March 21 after a fire swept through a bunkhouse at the Tahsis Co.'s Gold River logging camp.

A second man, who was asleep in the bunkhouse when the early morning fire broke out, escaped unharmed.

Uptight Squares 'Cancer Prone' Say Researchers

By STUART AUERBACH

PHOENIX (WP) — Uptight squares are more likely to get cancer than people free of emotional hangups. And, two experts said here Monday, they are less likely to respond well to treatment.

Government Has Gone To Pot

WASHINGTON (WP) — In the name of research, the U.S. government has gone to pot, but it won't say where.

The National Cancer Institute has awarded a contract to a suburban Virginia laboratory to make 2 million marijuana cigarettes and then use them to determine if smoking large amounts of marijuana can lead to cancer.

But an institute spokesman says the location of the project can't be disclosed because of "security" reasons. (Translation: We don't want too many hands in the pot.)

James F. Kieley, the spokesman, also said security dictated that the amount of marijuana stored for the experiments and the length of the research contract also be kept secret. "That would tell you how long the marijuana was going to be on hand," Kieley said.

The marijuana cigarettes will be puffed in smoking machines, and the condensates from the cigarettes then will be used in tests upon mice and hamsters at several laboratories, he said.

DALEY SEEKS FIFTH TERM

The Washington Post

Voters go to the polls today to pick the mayors of Chicago, Kansas City, Dallas and four other cities — the opening round of municipal elections across the U.S.

The biggest "name" is Chicago's Democratic Mayor Richard Daley, who is seeking a fifth four-year term, and is expected to get it.

But in Chicago, as in other cities, chronic urban issues have cropped up amid local peculiarities and personalities: White-black tensions, taxes, housing, schools, growing city costs and crime.

Furthermore, the theory that emotional factors make some people more prone to cancer than others is backed by "hardcore data" from studies on the way the brain and the body's natural defence system works. Dr. Claus Bahnsen, a psychologist, told an American Cancer Society seminar here.

The reports by Bahnsen and Dr. George F. Solomon, a Stanford University psychiatrist, dovetailed with studies of the influence of the body's natural defence system on cancer cells.

Emotional reactions to stress of both cancer and everyday life influence the production of hormones and the body's defence mechanism, which are important in the fight against cancer.

While a healthy emotional state may not be enough by itself to prevent cancer, said Bahnsen, "it may be enough to tip the balance and change the course of the malignant process." And, he added, it could be used to predict people likely to get cancer.

The cancer-prone personality, Bahnsen said, isn't able to handle stress well. He is self-centred, conformist, defensive and places great emphasis on superficial appearance. He has trouble expressing anger.

BOTTLED UP

"These people are bottled up. They do not have any channels for emotional discharge," said Bahnsen, director of the department of behavioral science in the Pennsylvania State mental health department.

He based his conclusions of studies of 500 cancer patients plus "several thousand" cancer patients seen by other researchers. He said only one in 10 cancer patients varied from the typical personality profile.

Solomon backed these conclusions with his experiments with rats. Female rats, for example, who fought when they were housed in crowded groups developed smaller tumors than rats that didn't express themselves by fighting.

Similarly, patients who "deal openly and honestly" and who assert themselves do better in treatment for cancer than patients who refuse to face up to the disease, he said.

TINGE OF YELLOW under the chin is supposed to mean you like butter. Or maybe it's margarine now. Paul Buck and Diana Walker are playing a game their grandmothers knew. It's hoped many children will turn their hand to skill with flowers this year in the junior classes of the annual Cadboro Bay Flower Show. It will be held at St. George's parish hall April 24, from 2 to 8 p.m. Show will include a display of sculptures by Mrs. Peggy Walton Packard.

U.S. Bill May Stop Canadians

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Senator Edmund Muskie (D-Me.) introduced Monday a bill designed to prevent Canadians and Mexicans from coming across the borders each day to work in the United States.

The senator said the measure is designed to protect American workers in border states and migrant laborers whose jobs he said are threatened.

His amendment to the Immigration and Nationality Act would abolish the so-called green-card commuter system, under which thousands of Mexicans and Canadians cross the border each morning and return to their homes in the evening.

Just as Expensive To Terminate SST

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The U.S. government will spend just about as much money to terminate the supersonic transport program as it would cost to complete the project, SST director William M. Magruder said Monday.

By the time the government pays off contracts and obtains rights to the SST, the money spent will nearly equal the $470 million estimated cost to build the plane, he told a news conference.

Magruder, here to woo private financial support to keep the project alive, said there is only a 100-to-1 chance of saving the project through private interests.

"My estimate, after talking with aerospace company presidents, is that I've got three to six months to work with the private sector and find the money — $300 to $600 million."

He said that after six months the men who worked on the project would be scattered and it would be difficult to get experienced manpower.

59 CONVICTED OF MURDERING SOUTH VIETS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Lt. William Calley Jr. was the 58th American serviceman convicted of murdering civilians in South Vietnam, Pentagon records show.

The records show 115 men had been charged with murder in the war zone. They included 81 army men, 28 marines, five navy men and one air force man.

While 59 were found guilty, 21 were convicted on lesser charges and 35 were acquitted, spokesmen said.

Too Near a Miss

REPORTS ACROSS THE COUNTRY tell of a general resumption of railway service following union and management agreement on a three-year contract for locomotive engineers. Although there may be delays in some areas, it is apparent today that a nation-wide strike has been averted, with only unofficial pre-strike action having halted trains in the west last week. Thus what could have become a national disaster has been avoided by non-stop negotiations over the weekend in a display of brinkmanship that was too realistic for comfort.

It needs little imagination to perceive the serious blow to the economy that could have resulted from a lengthy strike. Coming on top of already extensive unemployment, the addition of thousands of striking workers and many more thousands forced into idleness by the loss of freight and passenger transport, the loss of export business, particularly in grain, and other repercussions, could have been a major setback for Canada.

There has been no adequate explanation of the year's delay in negotiating a settlement, which was a main factor in the threat to strike. And now that the settlement has been reached, Labor Minister Mackasey has praised the union stand; referred to five employee fatalities in British Columbia canyons, which called for better safety measures; said that the men have earned the wage and fringe gains embodied in the agreement, and generally expressed satisfaction with the results.

In this light, there appears to have been still less justification for a failure to reach agreement without a year's delay. In so vital an industry as the railways it is incredible that a potentially dangerous situation should have been allowed to build for so long.

That is not to suggest that labor's demands should be met immediately the issue arises and industrial peace bought at any price. But waiting-out strategies are not to be encouraged, on either side, when so much of the nation's vital interest is at stake. There is a lesson in this settlement and it should be read. Canada is too important to Canadians to be hazarded in gambles.

Those Senate Vacancies

FOUR VACANCIES HAVE OCCURRED in the last few days, making 15 seats of the 102-member Canadian Senate that are now without occupants, and pressure for appointments will mount. Those who have the interests of the Upper Chamber at heart — who recognize it as a valuable factor in government — are justified in objecting to what seems to have been unnecessary delay in rounding out the full complement.

Since Prime Minister Trudeau showed a welcome inclination, when he last named Senators, to choose members from ranks other than those of the Liberal faithful, the prospects of a revitalized Senate seem bright. From time to time appointments have been made which reflect a decision to create in the Upper Chamber something more than a retirement home for political work horses of the party in power. It is notable that many useful initiatives have arisen in the Senate, where able men of experience have continued significant contributions to their country.

But while 15 of 102 seats remain vacant — and while pending resignations are put off until clear indication is given of the Prime Minister's intention to go outside Liberal ranks for some replacements on a merit basis, the status of the Senate suffers. Delay tends to strengthen the opinion of some members of the public that the Upper Chamber is of scant importance, that it can be ignored without loss to the Canadian system of government. That case can be argued, but the Senate should not be left to languish with the vacancies piling up.

The Global Eye

IN THE DARK AND COMPLEX world of military technology developments can occur which upset the position of a powerful country in a very short time. Recent reports from Washington indicate that the United States will turn increasingly to submarine-based missiles as a result of Russia's construction of enormous land-based weapons with the power to knock out the American Minuteman and Titan-2 land-based intercontinental missiles. The shift to the elusive underwater carriers has not nearly the significance, however, of a U.S. technological development which will cover the earth by means of satellite.

The new vehicle is called the 647 infrared satellite and will become operational this year. It will be able to signal the launching of offensive Russian missiles by land or sea a minute after firing. The new satellite will increase the warning time of incoming missiles by several minutes. Such a monitoring system could return a measure of calm to the men in the Pentagon and might provide the psychological breathing space in which substantial advances in the SALT negotiations could be promoted. In the mad logic of the atom this development may be regarded as a deterrent to attack, and hence a move toward security. But the layman will be less eager to view an extra "several minutes" between him and eternity as any great step forward.

Clouds Over Hollywood

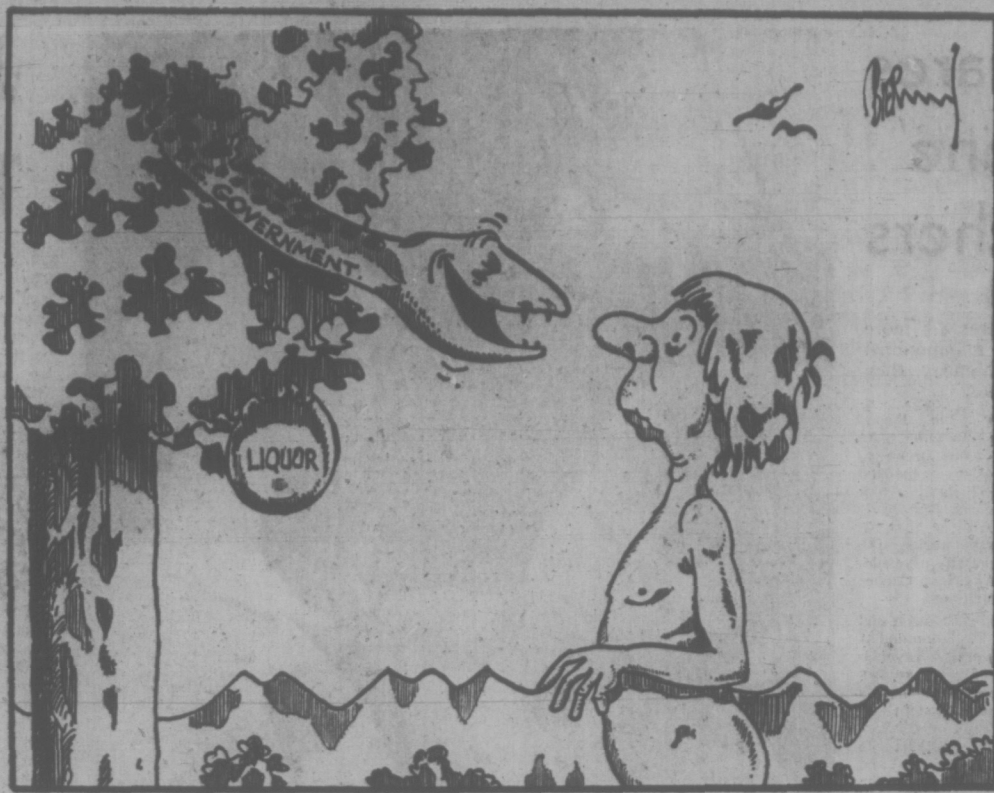

THE MOVIE-MAKERS OF HOLLYWOOD have made their case to President Nixon. They have grounds for distress. As Los Angeles Mayor Sam Yorty describes the situation: "The average of unemployment in the motion picture industry is catastrophic and in excess of 45 per cent, with the actors' and extras' unemployment exceeding 85 per cent."

Mayor Yorty's adjective seems justified on the basis of those figures. It is understandable, also, that the industry in that California centre should express resentment against the so-called "run-away" productions made in other countries where lower labor costs and government subsidies reduce expense.

But surely the issue that should be concerning Hollywood, once the screen capital of the world, is the market for the product it is producing. People in the business recognize the competition of television — in which moving picture interests are vitally involved — and also the changing public tastes. The point Hollywood seems unwilling to admit is that it no longer satisfies enough customers to meet the high costs of turning out pictures.

Hollywood's distress can be appreciated. The cure for it, however, can come only after a reappraisal of the product, and a determination to build into it a more universal appeal than has been revealed in recent fads. Without that improvement, the customer is not going to buy.

"... well, frankly ... I'd like you to pluck the apple but not eat it ... or eat the apple but not pluck it ... or, uh ..."

FROM MONTREAL

A Sharper Identity in Quebec Culture

By PAUL WHITELAW

IF you drive far enough east along St. Catherine Street, the city's main shopping thoroughfare, you eventually come to St. Lawrence boulevard, an almost symbolic frontier which few English-speaking Montrealers ever cross. As you pass the intersection, any bilingual aspect of the metropolis quickly disappears. The blatant neon signs outside the stores and clubs and taverns proclaim their pitches in French only and even the people somehow look different. The "Two Solitudes" is how Hugh McLennan put it, and you know what he meant. You are in another city, different from the downtown core with its steel and glass towers, and chic cafes and boutiques that you sometimes suspect have more in common with Paris than French Canada.

Eventually you come to Le Patriote, a boite a chansons that isn't advertised in the magazines that describe things to do and see in Montreal. You know it by reputation — it's supposed to be a separatist haunt. And, tonight, you're going to witness an experience. Robert Charlebois, back from the Olympia in Paris, is going to perform.

You climb the stairs to the second floor of the boite, and are led to a table at one side of a crowded room where 200 Quebecois are seated in small clusters of friends. It reminds you of Yorkville before the invasion of the teenyboppers from Toronto's suburbs, or the old Bunkhouse in Vancouver where you went to sip coffee and listen to folksingers. But, this crowd is older, and — you're in Montreal — you and your friend order a couple of beers and wait for the "spectacle" to begin.

Lights Dim

The lights dim, and the conversations, in French, cease. Tonight, says the MC, there are two performers, Charlebois and, first, a young chanteuse, Jacqueline Lemay.

We are going to hear, she tells you, the song of a young man "qui a moins que vingt ans ... less than 20 years old ... but who knows all." She leans toward the microphone, strumming her guitar, her soft voice sighing the words, in French, "I slept in the stars ... I won't rest on the earth." Polite applause, and she continues her repertoire. "La vie m'appelle ... life is calling me ... c'est le matin ... morning is here ... et le soleil ... and the sun ... life is calling me ... c'est le temps ... it's time to go to find my love, to dance, to be happy." When you translate it, it doesn't mean as much, but the patrons are pleased, even the beer glasses stay on the table as they listen.

Her act over, she leaves the stage, amid mild applause from the audience. Maybe you'll see her again, because as the proprietor tells us, many of Quebec's biggest stars — Georges D'Or, Louise Forestier and others — have launched their careers at Le Patriote. He vehemently denies that his boite is a haven for would-be revolutionaries — there are places like that, he says — but "la presse anglaise" has been very unfair in its reports.

Brightest Star

The waiters return to the floor, and we order more beer. And, just in time, as Charlebois walks through the boite. He looks like a pug-nosed prizefighter with an Afro haircut. One of French Canada's biggest stars, he's an educated man who sings in "jouis" — the word for slang that was coined by the late Andre Laurendeau, who left the editorship of Le Devoir to become co-chairman of the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism.

Charlebois represents the best in entertainment that there is today in Quebec, appealing to young people — the children of the early 1960s — who can identify with his mocking of a culture that has been infected by "jouis." English television, English records on French radio stations, Pepsi signs, and a public school system that is only just beginning to meet the needs of the population.

He strides on to the stage, silver studs along the seams of his skin-tight black jeans, a sequins quarter-moon and star on the front of his black T shirt. He isn't wearing the Canadiens hockey sweater and gold lame pants that have become a trademark, but he has got a towel around his neck.

"J'ai passe un nuit so-so a Toronto," he sings, "et j'ai mange du hot dogs pour diner." He mimics the pelvic gyrations of Elvis Presley. Another fast song, and he introduces his back-up group. "A la batterie ... on drums," he says in French and English, mimicking the bilingual announcements in the best style of Montreal Forum announcers who can be overheard in the background during hockey broadcasts. More songs, and then he turns to his audience. "Mesdames et messieurs, 20 seconds d'intermission." Reaching for the towel he wore to the stage, he wipes off the perspiration. Then he sings softly: "If I had good ideas I'd quit writing poetry and write a song that would sell 100,000 copies ... if only I had a penny to buy a pen to write the song down."

The set over, you watch the reaction of the audience. Not just applause, but a kind of pride. A certainty that there is, despite the "jouis" which Charlebois mocks, a Quebec culture "pas comme les autres" ... not like the others, as Quebec politicians say. You're somewhat envious, because your own English Canadian culture isn't always as easy to identify.

The "spectacle" over, you leave the smoke-filled boite and descend the stairs to St. Catherine Street. In the chilly spring air, you hail a cab. "Allez au Cercle des Journalistes, a l'Hotel Mont-Royal." You're going to the Press Club on the other side of St. Lawrence boulevard, back to the area where the waiters at some of the bistros speak English with Parisian accents to the customers, and your apartment overlooks the campus of McGill University in one direction and Eaton's and the head office of the Royal Bank of Canada in the other.

Maybe, you think, the secretary of state should organize exchange visits for some of Montreal's adults — giving free Metro tickets to "anglophones" who want to head east of St. Lawrence for a night on the town and Quebecois who want to shop at Ogilvy's in the west end.

Allende—Revolution Through the Ballot

By C. L. SULZBERGER

THE importance of Salvador Allende, Chile's new Marxist president, is that he is trying to introduce an entirely novel aspect to the idea of revolution.

"The revolution in the revolution" which he sponsors could prove far more significant than the violent processes advocated in a book bearing that title by the young French intellectual friend of Castro and Guevara, Regis Debray. Allende's contribution is the ballot-box revolution which so far has worked with surprising success. His intention is to use built-in weaknesses of traditional Democratic systems to attain power by legal means; then gradually, implacably, to accomplish revolutionary reforms, wholly revising the social, economic and political structure.

The ultimate goal would be creation of a classless state without private property, but even the most Marxist among Allende's serious supporters acknowledge that can only be achieved after many decades. The left-wing Socialist Foreign Minister, Clodomiro Almeyda, says: "Even Mao Tse-tung speaks of a thousand years."

The new President doesn't look or talk like a revolutionary. He is short, active, filled with nervous energy and a plain charm. His sight is poor and he wears unusually thick glasses. His style of dress is neat but not gaudy. He prefers to walk about while talking and appears younger than his 62 years.

He has been a politician since youth, coming from a left-wing family of modest bourgeois circumstances. He started out as a physician but was so angered by the poverty he saw among his patients that he dove into politics and helped initiate the Chilean Socialist party. This, unlike most socialist parties, was born after the Communists and is further to the left.

For more than 30 years he has been trying for high office. He was Minister of Health in a mild popular front coalition before World War II. Until being elected President last autumn by a minority vote, he lived in simple circumstances.

Even today his hobbies are unpretentious. He likes to play checkers. He occasionally rides. And he enthusiastically sails a little "snipe." When he can, he attends detective movies.

Letters

Cartoon Material?

Mrs. Audrey Johnson's recent statement concerning the current crisis at UVic impresses me as the most clear précis of the problem yet offered to the local reading public. It is fair, factual and pertinent.

Jennifer Walters, on the other hand, writes of "Mr. Courtney's superb performance as martyr." This is to malign a distinguished gentleman who has quietly endured several years of neglect here. He was invited and encouraged to come here on the basis that he would be provided with space, faculty, and funds enabling him to launch his program of Developmental Drama. The pathetic fact is that this year he received a budget of $300, spent $10 of this paltry sum, and then found the $290 residue had been diverted elsewhere!

This $10 extravagance was laid out on balloons; what a travesty! What a tragedy! Victoria loses its chance as a pioneer in the field of Developmental Drama. Richard Courtney withdraws sadly from the field, his balloons popped and shrivelled. His loyal students follow him to Calgary — what a splendid chance for your cartoonist!

This community owes much to Richard Courtney, and it may not honour its debt. Too little has been provided too late.

Mrs. Johnson's fine summation has evoked rejoinders from some who dissent from her view; she deserves applause for her stand. As for Professor Courtney, we can only express regret for poor treatment and salute him as he goes. — A. B. Russ, 25 Bastion Square.

Mass Hysteria

"Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad."

All right-thinking people, I am sure, will react with horror and disgust to the exhibition of mass hysteria, in sections of the United States, following the conviction of Lieut. Calley in the brutal murders of civilian men, women and children in Vietnam.

It is a frightful indication of the mental and moral deterioration of those who still uphold the American participation in what history will proclaim as one of the worst examples of genocide ever perpetrated by a "civilized" nation. While all wars are necessarily brutal it is seldom that atrocities are not only excused but boasted about in the name of God and patriotism.

What is particularly frightening is the fact that millions of our people are becoming immunized to killing and to the suffering and deaths of others, so long as we are able to enjoy our spathy and material comforts.

If any good can come out of this evil business it will be the strengthening of reaction against further participation in this unjustifiable war. This applies to Canada also while supplying material to the American war machine for use in Vietnam. — R. H. Mann, 1577 Gregory.

But essentially he is a very social animal and adores feminine company.

The notable gap in literature, Allende hardly ever reads, even cutting to a minimum the state documents he peruses. He far prefers oral reports and, being restless by nature, likes to have dozens of visitors and conferences every day. He can in no sense be called an intellectual and the impression is that his knowledge of Marxist-Leninist doctrine is cursory.

Nevertheless, he has personal assets of particular value in this country which makes a feast of two traits that can be translated as "togetherness" and "Chileanness." He mixes well, speaks well, uses television effectively. He makes a fine art of pushing things to just the limit possible that can avoid confrontation — which Chileans prefer to avoid.

Adept Politician

He is an adept manoeuvrer, knowing the weaknesses of each political faction and each politician. He exploits one against another. He hints to one Christian Democrat opponent that he will soon give him a Cabinet post, thus humiliating the party's chief. He implies to a leader from the extreme right that he will favor his pre-eminence in the opposition to cut down the Christian Democrats.

Allende appears to have the courage to face up to tough decisions. This kind of moral courage will be needed before long as inevitable difficulties set in. Economic, political, and even violent troubles are ultimately capable of frustrating Allende's ambitions.

Chile's experiment will be one with international fascination not so much because it is likely to spread in Latin America as elsewhere. Only Uruguay threatens now to try and emulate Allende's method and neither there nor elsewhere in this area are copies easy to make. Chile is isolated from its neighbors by geography and a special history and economy.

But there are more distant lands, such as Italy and perhaps some far-off day France, where the idea of ballot-box revolution has appealed to large blocs of voters. They have already experimented with popular fronts or Marxist participation in cabinets. The day of the streamlined constitutional revolution elsewhere will be emotionally and intellectually encouraged if it succeeds in this, small and hitherto little-known country.

Tanker Danger Here Now

OTTAWA — While west coast attention is riveted on the problems of the future if Alaskan tankers are put into service, an ex-navy MP's frantic signals about existing dangers of catastrophic oil spills go almost unnoticed.

But David Groos (L-Victoria) says he won't quit in his campaign to make residents of both coasts aware not only that dangers exist but also that there are potential solutions.

After the $4 million Arrow disaster in Chedabucto Bay he doesn't feel he has to stress the dangers to mariners.

But the appalling difficulty is that west coasters blithely ignore the fact that Arrow-sized potential oil spills sail through the sheltered waters of Juan de Fuca and Georgia Strait every other day right now.

"A 60,000-ton ore carrier carries almost 5,000 tons of fuel oil for its own power requirements — that's just about the amount of oil that landed up on the beaches from the Arrow," he said in an interview.

There are lots of freighters coming through those waters to Canadian ports now and the big bulk-carrier traffic will become an increasingly larger proportion of the total.

"Each one carries greater or smaller quantities of fuel oil which could be spilled in an accident even though they're not tankers, yet few people realize that.

"In addition, big oil cargoes sail the straits now. Last year there were eight 15,000-ton tankers that delivered oil to Vancouver — there's 120,000 tons that went up and down that narrow and tricky waterway on the Canadian side alone.

GROOS

"Even more big ship and tanker traffic goes through Juan de Fuca on the U.S. side now — every vessel carrying oil as fuel or cargo by thousands of tons."

The Arrow was a 15,000-ton tanker too. About one-third of her cargo was recovered, another third drifted in a huge slick out to the open sea and only one-third hit the maritime beaches — enough to contaminate to greater or lesser degree almost 200 miles of shoreline.

But in the nearly landlocked west coast straits where the flushing cycle takes three months to complete there's little likelihood that a third of any oil slick would ever make its way to open ocean.

Groos proposes "harbors of refuge" be established by the federal government on both coasts where pollution-fighting equipment such as booms and slick-lickers could be stored, ringbolts driven for holding barges and boats and tank farms established for unloading a stricken vessel.

As he envisages it, the defence, transport and environment departments should combine to establish a battle plan in which aircraft, ships, experts and equipment could be dispatched to converge on a disabled tanker or ship leaking fuel.

The task force would then "cocoon" the vessel to prevent an oil slick from spreading out and, perhaps after effecting temporary repairs or taking it under tow, convey it to the harbour of refuge for mopping up the problem.

Groos said the primary arm in such an operation would have to be the armed forces because they have the manpower, communications, vessels and aircraft on standby at various centres anyway. He said the defence department might even buy a couple of old but serviceable tankers cheaply to add to the task-force for pumping out a stricken vessel at sea before it sank.

He pointed out that a recent slick of bunker oil that hit the west coast national park beaches may not have been caused by a passing ship cleaning its bilges as suspected. It could have come from the fuel tanks of a Scandinavian freighter that sank near the area recently.

Groos says that while some fuel oil trapped in sunken ships inevitably escapes to the surface, the rest of it does considerable damage to sea-life on the continental shelf.

Groos adds that besides harbours of refuge and a prepared plan for meeting oil mishaps at sea, the federal transport department also should establish special high-precision medium range navigational beacons on the west coast which could give commercial, fishing and even pleasure craft instant and exact position through an automatic digital read-out device.

That should be supplemented by special scanning radar units and a ship control system much like the flight control centre at airports which would watch and direct maritime traffic in heavily used and enclosed waters like Georgia Gulf.

'Refuge harbors' urged

Glib Newscasts Make Us Callous

By JOHN MATHEWS
Washington Star

When Walter Cronkite, Howard K. Smith or David Brinkley — without showing emotion — report on television the latest death toll in Vietnam, an urban riot or the tragic floods in East Pakistan, are they contributing to a national callousness about the loss of human life?

Psychologist Israel W. Charney thinks that glibness, smugness and objectivity in television news reporting conveys to the public a hopelessness about human violence.

Hidden Message

Television announcers, he said, impart a hidden message to the public that says, in effect: "Well, folks, it's happened before, it's still happening and there is nothing we can do about it."

In a paper delivered at the annual meeting of the American Orthopsychiatric Association Charney suggested that television news reporting is missing an opportunity for inspiring in the public a deeper commitment to non-violence.

Without sacrificing factuality, Charney said, newscasters might develop "a more human language" for talking about tragedy. He said television announcers could get across to the public their feeling of sadness over loss of human life, anger over the wastefulness of violence and a feeling of hope that man can conquer his violent nature and live peacefully.

When reporting a fatal car accident, for example, a local television news reporter could describe the tragedy as "a sad accident today claimed the lives of..." Charney said. The reporter could interview surviving family members to convey to the public the human effects of the tragedy.

Charney urged newscasters not to switch to advertisements for toothpaste and such products immediately after giving a report on violence and death. Coupling tragedy with commercial announcements indicates to the public that both matters are of similar importance, he said.

Any reporting of violence and death, Charney continued, is bound to excite listeners, and perhaps give them a sense of "there, but for the grace of God, go I." Creating a sense of excitement and permitting a release for feelings of violence are "entirely appropriate," he said, but the newscasters should move from that mood and attempt to express sadness or anger at the violence and a reverence for human life.

Also participating at a symposium, "The Role of Mass Media in Mental Health," was James Aronson, a veteran radical journalist and author. He said that in terms of mental health, the press, radio, television and magazines are, with few exceptions, "a national disaster area."

Sausage Machine

In its reporting of the problems of war, racism and poverty, he said, the media are "marked by a prefabricated standardization of news and information which is both constricting and frightening." He called newspapers "a colossal sausage machine which grinds out words in digestible packages to suit each region of the country."

Aronson, a co-founder of the National Guardian, said: "The national interest is interpreted for the news consumer by the owners of the newspapers and managers of the syndicates — businessmen who identify themselves, because of their conglomerate financial concerns, with national policies which protect these financial concerns."

Will Doctors Elsewhere Follow Nfld. Lead?

THE GLOBE AND MAIL

Newfoundland's medical profession has just embarked on a path that their colleagues in the rest of Canada would do well to follow. The 370 doctors in Canada's easternmost province have voluntarily agreed to limit their gross incomes from medicare until a new fee schedule can be negotiated between the Newfoundland government and the provincial medical association.

The agreement, under which Newfoundland becomes the only province in Canada where the government and the doctors have got together to do something about the unrealistic levels of some earnings under medicare, is a significant step forward for the whole country.

Under the scheme, a measure of restraint will be applied to doctors' earnings arbitrarily reducing the amount the profession receives from medicare above established monthly maximums. In the case of general practitioners, the ceiling will be $4,500; for medical specialists, $5,500; for surgical specialists, $6,000. Income above these maximums will drop on a sliding scale and a mechanism has been built into the system to alleviate doctors who fall below the maximum.

These are gross income figures, of which the doctors, after paying office and other expenses, would retain as private income from one-half to two-thirds.

It appears that Newfoundland's doctors, unlike some of their other colleagues, have finally got the message that there is an impression abroad in this country that some doctors have been gouging the public, that the level of compensation being paid to much of the profession under medicare is too high.

The public view may be incorrect, or, at least, an oversimplification that fails to relate doctors' earnings to years of training and upgrading, hours of work, professional lifetime and costs of doing business. But this side of the argument is not likely to carry much weight when the public takes a close look at just how much doctors have been earning of late.

Consider the picture that must have been in back of the minds of Newfoundland doctors when they agreed to limit their incomes. As Newfoundland Health Minister Edward Roberts pointed out recently, more than half of the fee-for-service doctors in that province will be paid more than $50,000 this year; more than a tenth will be paid more than $90,000.

Mr. Roberts puts his finger on what would likely happen if there were no action on the matter and if the issue were forced into debate in the public arena. "The merits of the case would not be the points that people would seize upon," he said. "Such facts as the fact that there will be at least eight or 10 doctors earning more than $100,000 this year are not conducive to calm, rational debate in a province where in many communities all the people together don't earn $100,000 a year."

It is little wonder that Newfoundland's doctors have seen the light. What is difficult to understand, is the reluctance of the rest of the profession to accept the inevitable. The Canadian Medical Association is embarking on a program to place doctors' earnings under scrutiny, but much more than the moral suasion of a CMA study is needed.

A STRANGE, NEW PULSAR

By THOMAS O'TOOLE

A new pulsating star has been found in the milky way that is so different from most other pulsars that scientists are re-thinking their ideas about what these mysterious stars are, and how they came to be formed.

The newest pulsar, which lies in the northern constellation cygnus, was discovered by the space agency's Explorer 42 satellite. It is spinning on its own axis three times every second, "pulsing" huge quantities of X-rays into space each time it turns.

The cygnus pulsar is only the second X-ray pulsar to be found so far, but its pulse rate is only one-tenth that of the other X-ray pulsar, which lies at the centre of the crab nebula.

What makes the cygnus pulsar so different is that it is not surrounded by the remnants of an exploded star, which encircle the X-ray pulsar in the crab nebula.

The prevailing theory behind pulsars is that they are neutron stars, nuclear leftovers of exploding stars (super novae) that have collapsed into bodies so dense that a sugar cube of the same matter would weigh one billion tons.

The cygnus pulsar does not conform to this theory, primarily because there are no stellar fragments around it or near it that would have been left there by an exploding star. Its estimated age of 10,000 years is also too short a time for a supernova remnant to have disappeared.

While the cygnus discovery does not upset the neutron star theory, it does suggest that pulsars can be formed by more than one kind of celestial event.

One theory proposed at a recent meeting of the American Astronomical Society is that the cygnus pulsar could be one of the theoretical "black holes" in the sky that have never been seen by optical or radio telescopes on Earth.

The fact that the cygnus pulsar is only radiating X-ray energy, said Riccardo Giacconi of the American Science and Engineering Co., suggests that it might be one of the black holes, which are objects so dense that they allow no light to escape from them.

Friends, Lovers and Neighbors

By ALAN BRIEN
New Statesman

Do women who preach the evil of male supremacy realise how rarely we want it, let alone achieve it? The burdens and strains of being Big Daddy are greater, gradually weighing us down like an overloaded Christmas tree, than they imagine.

Some men are rapists, but then some women are teases. Strength is not all muscle, or else why should the many poor be exploited by the few rich?

Why can a David defeat a Goliath, why does North Vietnam continue to defy and repulse the armed force of America? How did the aristocrats come out on top? What makes blacks feel inferior to whites?

It is true that dominance can be institutionalised, translated into a law of nature, buried inside even the victims until it becomes synonymous with Our Way of Life. The parliamentary aims of Women's Liberation, distant as they seem this morning, will inevitably be achieved in some not too far away tomorrow. Equal pay, abortion on demand, state-subsidised contraception — it is disgraceful that these should need to be demonstrated for any more.

But those other intimate freedoms and personal rights, those tender qualities which cannot be legislated for or against, must be negotiated on the individual basis of man to woman.

Even the Don Juan, the patriarch, the wife-beater, the pasha, the pop star, the child-molester, the exhibitionist is not as armoured and implacable as he looks.

Whitey is afraid of the blacks; the middle classes are unnerved by shop stewards; and men are uneasy about women. Those who behave most like slave owners are often those who secretly feel most guilty about the past and apprehensive about the future. The men I know do not like them any more than the women I know do.

Just because we urge the liberation of mankind, we cannot be unsympathetic to any group struggling for its own special freedoms. We want to create a climate of opinion where the casual slanders, the atrocity stories, the envious fantasies, the dirty jokes, about women have become as intolerable to thinking men as they would be about Jews or blacks or slum-dwellers or foreigners.

We no longer pretend that women are insatiable, or small funny, or cannot be trusted to work unsupervised, or are children at heart, or keep their kohl in the bath.

But we would like some help from those we seek to help, some recognition that there is a stance for us between the cock and the capon, the stud and the neuter. We want to be reassured that the normal heterosexual is accepted as being a natural ally of the emergent female at least on equal terms with the homosexual.

As Dorothy Sayers wrote in a perceptive, angry article, as long ago as 1947, we are not the opposite sex but the neighbouring sex. We would just as soon be relieved of the privilege of constant decision making, of money grubbing and money dispensing, of having nests built around us like circus cages, of signing leases, mortgages and insurance policies, of the right to initiate everything from sexual intercourse to cocktail party chatter.

It is not surprising that women, like blacks, believe passionately they must liberate themselves by their own efforts. To give them their freedom would only be to entrap them in subtler, less visible bonds.

But there must be some subordinate, camp-following role we could play in the baggage train. Perhaps we should offer to make the coffee and wash up, shyly and modestly hanging around to be requisitioned later as the relaxation of the tired Amazon.

A mass of benevolent neutrals is an invaluable aid to any disciplined insurgent group engineering a revolution. We don't want to beat them. They won't let us join them. If that is the way things are, I suppose we must accept this not unwelcome period of passivity, and hope that we will not really be strung from the lamp-posts when the great day dawns.

Cygnus

Cygnus Corp. Ltd., the holding company through which R. A. Brown controls Home Oil Co. Ltd., increased earnings slightly during 1970 to $179,666 compared with $154,282 the year before, or 10 cents on a class share in both years.

The Cygnus gross revenue of $770,760 came principally from dividends of held stock and partially from interest on other investments.

Its chief expense — $564,414 — was an interest attributed mostly to a long-term loan of $5.4 million obtained in 1968 from a U.S. bank to purchase shares in Atlantic Richfield Co., secured by Home Oil and Atlantic Richfield shares.

The market value of 50,000 shares of Atlantic Richfield was $3.3 million compared with purchase price of $5.6 million while market value of 1 million Home class B voting shares was $23 million compared with $14.8 million at purchase.

W. Canada Seed

Western Canadian Seed Processors Ltd. earned $379,698 after income taxes or 14.9 cents a share for the six months ended Jan. 31, compared with $265,262 or 10 cents last year.

The company said profits were affected during the second quarter by a month-long shutdown due to major equipment installation.

Sales were reported at $7.64 million for the six-month period, up from $6.94 million.

McIntyre

A group of Japanese steel mills and gas suppliers have signed a 15-year contract with McIntyre Porcupine Mines to import a total of 45.75 million metric tons of coking coal from Alberta.

Nippon Kokan Kaisha said the contract calls for annual shipments ranging from 2 million to 3.5 million tons from the Smokey River mines over 15 years beginning late in 1973.

NKK said the Japanese group had agreed in principle to supply the Canadian firm with $52.5 million (U.S.) in a loan to help develop the project.

Rio Tinto

The Rio Tinto-Zinc mining group with major holdings in Canada, says its pre-tax profits for 1970 showed a 14.5-per-cent increase over the previous year. The 1970 figure was $198 million. This included a substantial amount produced by Polar Holdings, a company developed by Jim Paterson, of Vancouver, and taken over by RTZ in May.

Triton

A suspension of trading in shares of Triton Explorations Ltd. on the Canadian Stock Exchange remains in effect until further notice.

The exchange said Triton shares, suspended from trading March 26 following a sharp decline in market price, were to have been reinstated April 1, after the Montreal company signed a 15-year contract to supply a European firm with $165 million worth of copper concentrates starting in 1974.

The exchange decided to maintain the suspension "pending the filing of satisfactory documentation supporting" the Triton deal.

Central-Del Rio Oils Ltd. and its wholly owned subsidiary, Canadian Pacific Oil and Gas Ltd., earned $12.6 million or 41 cents a share during 1970, including $750,804 or two cents a share from the sale of assets.

In 1969, when the firms first began integrated operation, net income was $12 million or 40 cents a share, totally from operations.

President J. M. Taylor said in the annual report a private bill is before parliament to incorporate Central-Del Rio as a federal company so the amalgamation with Canadian Pacific can be completed under the name PanCanadian Petroleum Ltd.

Construction of a Dow Chemical Co. $20 million magnesium and chlorine plant at Dallasport, Wash., has been delayed.

The plant, which is 15 per cent finished, probably will not be completed until Jan. 1, 1975, a Dow spokesman said.

The company decided to postpone completion because market projections indicate magnesium production would be adequate to meet demands for the next few years.

The decision also was based on uncertain electricity and natural gas supplies.

OTTAWA (CP) — The RCMP confirmed that two brothers from Yellowknife have been arrested and charged following an investigation into the selling of shares in an international investment fund.

Clifford and Richard Bennett of Yellowknife were arrested there in December, 1970, and charged with fraud and circulating false statements. They now are on bail and preliminary hearing has been set for July 6.

An RCMP spokesman said the investigation involves the selling of shares in a mutual fund distributed by Selective Distribution International Est., based in Munich, Germany.

Some 18,000 shares were sold in Canada.

The RCMP would give no further details on the investment fund, but the spokesman said to his knowledge the investigation has nothing to do with relief supplies to Biafra.

The Sunday Telegraph in London, Eng., says two men were arrested in Yellowknife in connection with "an international investment and fund scandal" involving relief supplies for Biafra.

Canadian Reserves Down

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's foreign exchange reserves edged down $5.6 million during March to stand at $4,850.3 million at the end of the month, the finance department reported today.

There was an increase of $75.9 million in Canada's holdings of U.S. dollars, which reached $3,152.5 million, a record, at March 31. But this was more than offset by a reduction in Canada's reserve position in the International Monetary Fund resulting from the IMF's transactions with other countries.

In addition to the U.S. dollars held by the Bank of Canada, the exchange fund account and the reserve-general, the official reserves included $791.2 million in gold, unchanged from the end of February, and $15 million in other foreign currencies, up $1.9 million for the month.

Canada's reserve position in the IMF, totalling $586.3 million, is the amount Canada is entitled to draw from the fund without question if it is needed for Canada's balance of international payments.

Beaver Lumber

Beaver Lumber Co. Ltd. has reported net earnings in 1970 of $2.7 million, down from the 1969 level of $3.34 million.

The firm said 1970 was "the most difficult in recent history." Sales fell to $78.5 million from the previous year's $83.7 million.

The report said profits and sales declined in 1970 in Ontario, Saskatchewan and Alberta. Sales in Manitoba were comparable with 1969 and B.C. recorded increases in sales and profits.

CIGO

Canadian Industrial Gas and Oil Ltd. earned $8.64 million or 43 cents a share in 1970, compared with $8.23 million or 41 cents a share in 1969.

Revenue was $33.26 million, down from $33.6 million in 1969. Production of crude oil and natural gas liquids averaged 8,709 barrels a day, compared with 8,200 barrels, and sales of natural gas rose to 94.4 million cubic feet a day, from 88.3 million cubic feet in 1969.

Dow

Construction of a Dow Chemical Co. $20 million magnesium and chlorine plant at Dallasport, Wash., has been delayed.

The plant, which is 15 per cent finished, probably will not be completed until Jan. 1, 1975, a Dow spokesman said.

Before the Judge

A 28-year-old city man was sentenced to three years in prison and his 38-year-old wife given a suspended sentence with a one-year probation Monday when they pleaded guilty to a joint charge of breaking, entering and theft.

Harold C. Pearce and his wife, Doreen, of 68 Government, were arrested by police early Monday morning outside the Beacon Drive-In restaurant, 126 Douglas, a policeman testified.

He said the woman was apprehended shortly before 2 a.m. as she was leaving a door on the west side of the building.

Her husband, the officer said, left from the other side of the building and was caught after a short chase.

Pearce had screw drivers and a pair of pliers in his possession and was wearing socks on his hands at the time.

He also had about $82 in silver that he admitted taking from a cigarette machine, the policeman said.

The woman had about $4 in a sock and was carrying another sock.

Robert J. Flett, 19, of 137 Clarence, was sentenced to five months' definite and nine months' indeterminate for three charges of breaking, entering and theft, one of possession of marijuana and another of possession of MDA.

Flett was apprehended March 12 when he took $38 from a meat market at 208 Menzies.

He had in his possession several capsules of the drug MDA and a quantity of marijuana.

Further investigation revealed that Flett was involved in two earlier break-ins, one last December and the other in February, of area businesses.

Approximately $101 was taken in one of the break-ins and $12 in the other.

Victor W. Alfordy, 19, of Mission City, was fined $250 when he pleaded guilty to stealing two items from Woodward's department store April 2.

A security officer said the accused was observed putting them into his jacket pocket about 8:30 p.m. The merchandise was valued at $3.58.

Patrick D. Kelly, 18, also of Mission City, was fined $250 when he pleaded guilty to shoplifting.

A security officer said the accused in company with Alfordy was seen taking two items, worth $7.99, from Woodward's April 2.

Edward C. Boylan, 43, of 260 Gorge, was fined $250 and prohibited from driving for three months in traffic court by Judge E. F. N. Robinson for driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 per cent.

Robinson said the man could drive only on business purposes during the ban.

BUST THAT ANSWER

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Attorney Kenneth Edlin says he asked the wife in a divorce case her age and she blurted in Superior Court: "Thirty-eight ... I mean — oh, my — you got me so flustered I gave you my bust measurement."

$30 Extra Social Assistance, May 1

An extra $30 a month in social assistance will be made available to disabled persons by the provincial rehabilitation department effective May 1.

Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi announced the policy change Monday, four days after taking a verbal pounding in the legislature from opposition critics who said the current rate of $105 a month is too low.

Gaglardi said the change resulted from lengthy consideration of the matter, not from pressure.

All mentally and physically disabled persons receiving social allowance — not qualifying for the federal disabled persons allowance — will be eligible for an increase of up to $30.

The person's needs and degree of disability will be considered in processing applications for increases, Gaglardi said.

He estimated about 10,000 or 12,000 persons will be eligible for the increase, which may cost the government up to $4 million. Gaglardi said there would be "a certain amount of sharing" by the federal government.

Protesting Students Set Up Picket Lines

ANTIGONISH, N.S. (CP) —

Students at St. Francis Xavier University set up picket lines around classrooms and administrative offices today as they continued their protest against a university decision to expel a third-year student who was found guilty of inciting other students to violate university housing policies.

Mrs. Anne Edgar, vice-president of the student union, said faculty members, administration officials and the 2,400-students at the university would be prevented from crossing the picket lines.

While students planned for today's strike, Antigonish town police continued their investigation into a fire bombing early Monday that university officials say caused more than $10,000 damage to a reading room in the library.

Mrs. Edgar said the student union had no knowledge of the bombing.

Student protests originally result from a university ban against entertaining females in men's residences. Students protested that measure and 185 men have been charged with violating the housing ban.

The university discipline committee found a third-year student guilty of inciting others to violate the housing ban and has ordered him to leave the university after writing exams later this month.

Two fourth-year students were also found guilty by the discipline committee and will be allowed to write exams but have been told they will have to receive their degrees in absentia.

Kiosks, Hostels to Open on Island

New Measures to Facilitate Hitch-Hiking

The federal government will finance three youth information kiosks and at least two hostels on Vancouver Island this summer, B.C. hotel coordinator Hugh Wade said in Vancouver Monday.

The kiosks and hostels are part of the government's $50 million local initiative program to take care of the estimated 250,000 young people expected to be out of work and on the road between June and September.

Wade, a supporter of the Victoria Youth Council and owner of the Haunted Bookshop, 845 Fort, said there is a serious need for hostels in Nanaimo and Port Alberni. Applications from those towns to set up hostels have already been sent to the secretary of state's department.

A third hostel may be established in Campbell River, Wade said, if a community or youth group shows the need.

"They supply the money if you supply the information," he said.

In Victoria, Cool-Aid will continue to look after hostel facilities.

Fifty kiosks are to be set up across the country, five of them on Vancouver Island and the Lower Mainland. Island locations will be Victoria, Nanaimo and Port Alberni.

There may be two kiosks in Vancouver, or, alternatively, one in Vancouver and one in Hope, a major north-south, east-west junction for travellers.

Located on highways, the kiosks will serve hitchhiking youths, tourists and the general public as centres of information on local employment and local attractions, where to find a place to stay, and travelling conditions.

The kiosks could also become official hitchhiking stations, Wade said, guaranteeing a certain amount of security to those seeking lifts and motorists who pick them up. Hitch-hikers could give their name to the kiosk operator and licence number of cars that stop would also be recorded.

Each kiosk will have a telephone and emergency medical supplies and access to backup services such as legal aid.

The kiosks are pre-fabricated structures about 35 feet high, consisting of a brightly colored plastic cover on a teepee-style aluminum frame. They will employ four people or six if open 24 hours a day.

It's expected they will begin operations by mid-June and close around mid-September.

"There's been a lot of planning put into this and a lot of last year's experience has been taken into consideration," Wade said.

"The response from public and community groups has been tremendous."

Vancouver hostel facilities will be operated by the city welfare division under grants from the federal health and welfare department.

Wade is now looking for hostel applications for small hostels (25-50 people) to serve outlying Lower Mainland municipalities.

400 to Be Laid Off

YUBOU — Nearly 400 sawmill workers, truckers and pulp mill workers will be put out of work Friday when B.C. Forest Products Ltd. closes its Yubou sawmill division for two weeks.

A company spokesman said Monday 379 men will be laid off due to a poor export market for lumber, a low supply of logs because of an unusually long winter, and a shortage of freight cars.

A third shift at the sawmill, involving 79 men, was shut down earlier.

Arrow Transfer Co. Ltd. and Hearsey

Transport Ltd., which transport lumber and chips from the mill, said today they will lay off a combined total of 21 men due to the shutdown.

Crofton Pulp and Paper Co. said the shutdown will involve closing down one pulp machine and the laying off of a few employees for a couple of days.

An official of Doman's Transport Ltd., which also transports lumber from Yubou, said he doesn't expect any extensive layoffs over the Yubou shutdown.

TRUSTEES REAFFIRM DECISION

Fairbridge School Issue Killed Again

DUNCAN — The old Fairbridge School does not fit into the future plans of the school district Cowichan school trustees decided Monday when they reaffirmed their resolution of July last year to end all negotiations.

Purchase of the old school, which has been vacant for about 10 years, has been brought before Cowichan school boards since 1955. Each time trustees have turned down the proposal.

The issue was re-opened recently when Burford Management Service Ltd. sent a letter on behalf of the Fairbridge School Society of England stating it is available if a report is needed on the property.

"To the best of my knowledge we have made no request to the firm," board chairman Dave Heywood said.

After lengthy discussion trustees received a filed letter.

Trustee Margaret Whittaker, who is a strong advocate of the purchase of the school and has been circulating a petition, was the only board member to vote against the resolution.

Earlier she had failed to receive a second on a motion that the board commission a report of school population and building plans in connection with the Fairbridge question.

She has frequently urged the board to investigate the possibility of renovating the school to ease space problems.

"I can't see the board spending any more time on this," said Trustee Stan Turner. "It is a derelict building. We spent a great deal of time going into depth studying this building. I just can't see letting the people of this district throw more money down the drain."

The school was built around 1932, he said.

"It has been vacant for the past five or 10 years and is falling down."

If the $557,800 building referendum in May is turned down over this issue "it will be too bad for our children," Turner said.

Trustee David Bradbury said it is unfortunate that misleading information has been given out about Fairbridge by Mrs. Whittaker and her husband.

Bradbury said South Cowichan ratepayers were told the school and property could be purchased for $100,000 and the building brought up to acceptable standards by a reputable builder for $40,000.

He asked Mrs. Whittaker to supply a detailed report on how this could be done because "from our information so much has to be done to the school $40,000 just couldn't cover it."

A year ago board members had been advised that it would cost over $100,000 alone to renovate the school to government standards.

"The district is transporting 2,100 students and we want to cut down on this," Bradbury said.

"If we purchase Fairbridge we will have a permanent

Shotgun Firings Land Man in Court

DUNCAN — A 55-year-old Cobble Hill man was remanded until April 19 in Duncan court Monday after pleading guilty to dangerous use of a firearm.

Court was told that Ralph Forrester of Moss Road discharged a shotgun five times in the yard of Mabel McKee, also of Moss Road, on Friday and once pointed the loaded gun at her 15-year-old daughter Pat.

Police said Forrester had a blood alcohol count of .22 per cent at the time of the incident.

RESCUE EXERCISE CALLED BIG SUCCESS

A search and rescue exercise staged by 35 volunteers Sunday in the rugged Koksilah Ridge area south of Duncan was a big success, RCMP Constable Hal Orrick, chief rescue officer for B.C., said Monday.

The group was composed of Duncan civil defence volunteers, members of Juan de Fuca Citizens' Band Club and amateur radio operators from Victoria.

The object of the exercise, to find "missing" hiker Alec Peters of Cobble Hill, was achieved in 80 minutes.

MAKE WAVES

What woman would shy from dreams of being adrift at sea and rescued by a handsome Errol Flynn-like pirate . . . more salt than the sea itself. For such romantic adventures, updated a little. Koret of California. After all, not every sailor has to look one. Made of Fortrel and cotton, Koret of California ship-shape co-ordinates just never need pressing. And have the added advantage of Scotchgard stain repellency . . . a fact not taken lightly when the galley is constantly moving. And after the "rescue" you can just machine wash and tumble dry them all. Since no two women will ever agree on what makes them look best at sea, look for Koret of California at Eaton's in white, navy, blue, red, loden and green. Sizes 10 to 18.

President's treatment of profs 'obvious threat' to tenure procedures at Uvic

A Canadian Association of University Teachers report on the current contract and tenure dispute involving three faculty at the University of Victoria is harshly critical of President Bruce Partridge, the Times has learned.

The 23-page report of the academic freedom and tenure committee, adopted by the CAUT executive April 3, is the basis on which the executive recommended censure of Uvic.

Officially scheduled for release Wednesday morning, the document deals exhaustively with details of procedures and negotiations in the cases of two assistant professors denied tenure and a lecturer denied promotion and tenure.

Dr. Tikam Jain of the chemistry department, Dr. William Goede of English and Toby Graff of philosophy all appealed their cases to the CAUT in the winter of 1969-70. Their cases have been the central issue in continuing student and faculty upheavals at Uvic since Christmas of this year.

The report is consistently critical of Partridge for refusing to give the three men involved reasons for his decisions or any opportunity to defend themselves from those reasons.

It charges that Partridge's treatment of the men constitutes "an obvious threat to the working of academic appointment committees at the University of Victoria."

In all three cases, the report says, the university reversed favorable decisions for the faculty members from elected committees designed especially to make recommendations on issues of tenure and promotion.

Although Jain had negative recommendation from his department colleagues, the faculty advisory committee recommended tenure "in the full knowledge of all the elements in the case."

But the president reversed the decision of the advisory committee.

"We must therefore conclude that President Partridge in reversing the decision of the Faculty Advisory Committee was setting his executive authority in opposition to the academic judgment of a committee specifically charged with the responsibility for tenure decisions.

"In so doing President Partridge has not only worked an injustice on Professor Jain, but has also threatened the rights of all faculty members at the University of Victoria by usurping a decision that belongs properly to an elected tenure committee."

"A university president exercises his authority in a wide range of matters; but he exercises it improperly when he reverses (without appeal) a decision from an academic appointment and tenure committee."

The report says that when a president disagrees with the findings of such a committee, he should appoint an impartial external tribunal to hear the matter.

Partridge has repeatedly rejected the CAUT recommendation for an impartial tribunal during the past two months of negotiations on the three cases.

Dr. Goede's case is similar to that of Dr. Jain, the report says, except that the English professor had even more favorable recommendations.

He was recommended by a five to one vote in his departmental committee, and by the faculty advisory committee. The dean of arts and science, Dr. John Climenhaga, however, recommended against tenure.

Partridge again reversed the decisions of the two committees, later telling the CAUT the five to one vote at the departmental level was only "a narrow margin" of support.

"Professor Goede was denied tenure without being offered reasons for the decision, and without being afforded the opportunity to speak to those reasons before a final decision was made," the report says.

"The critical issue is the same as that in the Jain case, namely that the President took it upon himself to reverse the decision of an elected committee charged with the responsibility for tenure decisions and gave the faculty member involved no mechanism to appeal the reversal."

"The treatment of Professor Goede is an obvious threat to the working of academic appointment committees at the University of Victoria."

Philosophy lecturer Toby Graff also had strong support from his department, from the chairman of the department, and from the university review committee, but again favorable recommendations were reversed, the report says.

"On 16 October, Mr. Graff wrote to President Partridge requesting the reasons for the denial of promotion. On 30 October, President Partridge replied: 'I would be glad to arrange for you to meet with your department chairman, your Dean, and me, to discuss on a 'without prejudice' basis, your reactions to the decision not to promote you to Assistant Professor,'" the report says.

"On 10 November, Mr. Graff replied to President Partridge: 'I am quite familiar with my 'reactions' to the decision not to promote me, but I still do not know the reasons for it. Accordingly, I do not wish therapy, just an explanation.'"

Graff's case is relatively simple, the report says: "His department believes that he should be promoted and has twice so recommended unanimously."

SMITH RESIGNS

The associate dean of arts and science at the University of Victoria confirmed this morning that he has submitted his resignation to President Bruce Partridge.

Dr. Peter Smith, formerly chairman of the Classics department, told the Times of his resignation from the administrative post in a telephone interview this morning. "Because the rumor appears to be spreading on and off the campus I feel required, regrettably, to confirm the fact that I have submitted my resignation as associate dean of arts and science."

"This resignation was offered to the president and the board of governors on Sunday, April 4, but will not be received by the board until their next meeting scheduled for Monday, April 19. Until that time at least I feel that I should make no further comment," Dr. Smith said.

THE TOOLS AREN'T THE BEST, but Cool-Aid volunteers are convinced they can make a worthwhile project out of a farm they plan to operate in Saanich this year. The municipality leased them three acres of land for $1 Monday night, and after trying it

Mayor's Smiles Burns Ex-Fireman

Fired fireman Dale Kuster is upset because the mayor waved at him.

Kuster is in the seventh day of his last stand against the Saanich fire department and union, picketing the fire hall from which he was dismissed June 30.

"I mean, you know, when I'm out there picketing, and the mayor drives by on his way to the hall, and he smiles and waves, I get the feeling he's falling his obligation to the ratepayers," Kuster said today.

Kuster, 25, was told he was fired because he wears glasses, an acceptable impediment for a firefighter. He was told he could do the job if he wore contact lenses, so he tried them. He was dismissed after he went back to standard glasses.

"I mean, you know, the chief (Joe Sutherland) wears glasses, and he hasn't been fired."

Mayor Hugh Curtis said Kuster could have the meeting he wants with personnel director Bill Locker "any day he likes." But the mayor found it "strange" that Kuster started picketing the fire hall only after he had been away from his job nine months.

"It reduces his credibility," said Curtis.

About the smiling and waving: "It's just a friendly gesture from one human being to another. What's a person supposed to do, ignore him?"

Esquimalt Ships Win

The Esquimalt-based 2nd Canadian Destroyer-Escort Squadron has won the Inter-Squadron Gunnery Trophy, beating out the two squadrons based in Halifax, N.S.

Rear-Admiral Richard Leir today presented the trophy to Capt. Michael Martin, squadron commander, in a special ceremony aboard HMCS Qu'Appelle.

That Darned Elusive Flu Bug

Sorry all you hypochondriacs — but there's just no flu epidemic in Greater Victoria. Not yet, anyway.

But the influenza virus which is present appears to make its victims sicker than usual, with high fevers and stays in bed running up to two weeks or longer.

High school absenteeism is quite a sensitive indicator in such matters, Dr. A. A. Larsen, provincial epidemiologist, said today.

A check of four Greater-Victoria high schools shows the usual absentee rate for this time of year or only a slight increase. Of three major businesses checked — Woodward's, The Bay and Eatons — only at Eaton's there was an above-average number of staff away with flu the suspected cause.

Larsen said that when flu outbreaks occur he generally gets a rapid indication from medical health officers calling him. Two did call about three weeks ago but it's been quiet since.

The flu bug circulating this year has been identified as a virus strain labeled "B." The virus which circulated last year was the so-called Hong Kong variant of A2.

The "B" strain hasn't been around for a number of years, said Larsen, so it's likely there are quite a few people who don't have much immunity to it.

Meanwhile, St. Joseph's Hospital is asking visitors to "use a little discretion." For the protection of patients, people who have flu signs or a cold are asked to stay away until they clear up.

Men Land In Hot Water After Swim

A drinking bout with an unexpected swim off the Dallas Road breakwater Monday afternoon brought fines for two men and a jail sentence for a third today.

Judge William Ostler fined Michael Hill, 21, of 1334 Pandora, and Elmer Graham, 40, of 550 Johnson, $25 each and sentenced Jack McGrath, 56, of 138 Dallas, to 15 days in jail.

They had pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance.

McGrath asked the judge if he could be sent to jail for 30 days to straighten out.

"My ribs are cracked and my chest is bothering me," he said.

Ostler said McGrath "seems to have written his own prescription and from the look of him it's a pretty good one."

Prosecutor John MacIntyre said police received a report about 4:30 p.m. Monday that two men had fallen off the breakwater.

CRASH KILLS VICTORIA MAN

A Victoria driver was killed and his two passengers seriously injured when their northbound car slammed head-on into a steel bridge abutment on the Trans-Canada Highway north of Ladysmith Monday night.

David Robert Anderson, 20, of 1135 Catherine St., Victoria, was killed instantly.

His two passengers, in critical condition in Nanaimo General Hospital with multiple fractures and internal injuries, were Roger Leslie Dyer, 27, of 959 Balmoral St., Victoria, and a Winnipeg youth.

The crash occurred at 7:15 p.m. at the Haslam Creek Bridge. Nanaimo RCMP are investigating.

A VICTORIA WOMAN whose husband died in late February called on me the other day. She was both sad and angry.

"Frank's death was a terrible blow," she said. "It still is, but I've been doing my best to face up to the prospect of life without him. Then I got this in my mail."

"This" was an obituary notice, printed in plastic and accompanied by a printed slip which carries the name and address of a New Brunswick supplier.

"We hope you will be pleased with the enclosed Memorial Obituary which has been prepared for your consideration," the blurb runs in part. "Should you like it and desire to keep it, just send $1 in the enclosed envelope. We will also be glad to make up additional memorials for friends, relatives and other members of the family..."

Stamped in blue ink on the slip is a further message: "All proceeds received this month will be donated to some charitable organizations. The charities, assuming these exist, are not specified."

Neither the unsolicited token nor the uncouth scrawl that goes with it brought the slightest comfort to the woman who received it. She regards the pitch as a peculiarly coldblooded attempt to cash in on death and grief.

This gimmick is but one of the devices employed by those who would extract money from the bereaved. One in particular is an outright racket. Here's how it works:

A woman recently widowed receives a set of books or some other merchandise assertedly ordered by her husband from a distant city. The bill presented is of dizzying size. She doesn't remember any such purchase, and can find no record of it among her husband's effects. But she sends off a money order, and the chances are that some pirate who uses the mails to defraud has added another victim to his score.

A call to Better Business Bureau or police might have saved her a balking and perhaps started some cop artist toward his come-uppance.

AVOID CONFLICT

Across Canada some 1.8 million students — including 400,000 university undergraduates — will be released from studies. The federal government's $57.8 million Opportunities for Youth program announced March 16 represents an attempt to deal with all the extra people and prevent them from competing for jobs with unemployed members of the permanent work force. Government agencies are to provide as many part-time jobs as possible and private industry and business will be encouraged to do likewise. Funds will be generated through the secretary of state department to enable community organizations to set up youth information kiosks and hostels.

Funds are also available for projects in the social development and environmental fields that will employ students. However, even with the surge of federal assistance

Last week brought us a couple of junior house guests. Their names are Dean and Kevin, they live in Vernon, and they came to Victoria with about 70 other seventh-graders on an inter-school junket.

The weekend program laid on by the host school kept them busy. They cruised Esquimalt harbor. They looked in at several Victoria tourist attractions. With the rest of their group, they peered at the moon through Dominion Astrophysical Observatory's big eye.

On Sunday morning, Kevin and Dean added some beach shells and damp starfish to their luggage, then set off for home. But before they left, they gave us a little pottery container of Okanagan honey.

The pot, they explained, was one of a batch made in Vernon as gifts to the Victoria families that billeted students.

A pleasant gesture, and an appreciated souvenir that demonstrates sound thinking on somebody's part. Which

Students Face 'Dearth of Jobs'

By BOB MITCHELL

Students looking for summer jobs will find a "dearth of opportunities" to earn money, Victoria Manpower manager George Bevis said today.

Bevis made his remarks as the local Manpower branch announced more than 15,000 local high school, and university students will be released from studies during May and June.

How many will seek jobs is not known, but it's certain there won't be enough jobs to go around.

Manpower asked four school boards in the Capital Region to submit numbers of students in various grades. The totals include students from Greater Victoria, Sooke, Saanich and Gulf Islands school districts.

Grade 9, 3,619, grade 10, 3,458, grade 11, 3,191, grade 12, 2,845 for a total of 13,113. From the University of Victoria come these figures on the number of resident students: first year 952, second 707, third 490, fourth 350, fifth 88, Total 2,587.

with all the extra people and prevent them from competing for jobs with unemployed members of the permanent work force.

Government agencies are to provide as many part-time jobs as possible and private industry and business will be encouraged to do likewise. Funds will be generated through the secretary of state department to enable community organizations to set up youth information kiosks and hostels.

Funds are also available for projects in the social development and environmental fields that will employ students.

However, even with the surge of federal assistance students still remember the bleak employment situation last year when 45,000 undergraduates did not find summer work, according to a Canadian Press survey.

Of those who did, 30 per cent were employed by the federal or provincial governments, and earnings averaged $860 per student.

Oak Bay municipal council has applied for an $83,000 grant under the local initiative job-creating plan, and hopes to employ 32 students.

PLAYGROUNDS

Greater Victoria school board has applied for $33,658 for building adventure playgrounds at some elementary schools.

Victoria, Saanich and the Uvic Alma Mater Society also plan to make applications. Bevis said the criteria by which proposals will be considered include cost, number of students who would be employed, practicability and regional distribution of job opportunities.

Applicants will be notified direct by the secretary of state's department.

NO PANACEA

Bevis said construction — a labor-intensive industry — is the best indicator of the employment situation, and while the number of building permits taken out is up, many of the permits are for apartment buildings, which means construction will not necessarily start immediately.

Arthur Mayse . . .

When the ferry sailed from Tsarwassen at noon, Donnie was in a car, leashed, but with a window left partly open. Between check-ups, he apparently slipped his collar and scrambled out to the car deck. Ferry personnel scoured the ship for him, but he hasn't been seen since.

His owner is grieving herself sick over the loss of her friend. Her mother fears a return of her daughter's former trouble.

Daughter and mother believe some ferry passenger may have found Donnie (grey muzzle and hair over his eyes) and taken him in charge.

Anyone who can furnish a clue to his whereabouts has but to give me a shout.

That's it, except to quote the message glimpsed by a friend on the back of what he describes as a hippy bus with Arizona plates: "Support your local planet." And why not?

Our misused earth has supported mankind for countless years with damn little in return!

Donnie, a cross between miniature and toy poodles, was in the nature of a "get well" present to a girl who had suffered an emotional breakdown. He was then a pup, and his cheerful presence helped his mistress through a difficult recovery.

They have been constant companions since. This is a much-loved dog.

Elk Lake will be the setting of a miniature Swiftsure Sunday when the Elk Lake Sailing Association holds its centennial regatta.

Open to anyone who has a dinghy and a yen to compete, the regatta gets under way at 10 a.m. There'll be all kinds of crafts, ranging from Sabots and El Toros to the more sophisticated centreboarders.

Registration will take place just prior to the first race at Hamsterly Park, just off the Pat Bay Highway at the north end of the lake.

ELSA officials warn that competitors must have life-jackets or a proper floater jacket.

The club, which enjoys sailing at the lake every Sunday morning, is hoping that many out-of-towners will be on hand to offer some lively competition.

old Indian longhouses and other relics of the past.

A smaller VCC group will leave Thursday evening for a weekend in the Nitinat Lake area, portaging from there to Hobbit Lake, and portaging on again to Tsusiat Lake.

One of the reasons for this trip is to give members a first-hand look at an area that may be lost to logging interests if it is not included in the West Coast Park.

The Turkey Head Sailing Association wound up its season Sunday with two races in waters off Oak Bay Marina, 38 boats making the start line in the morning and 36 on line for the afternoon race.

Frank Rhodes' Rampage finished the season in style, coming first overall in the last race and third in the last race and third in the last race.

Winner of the first race was Greg Oliver's TWeather and second, Steve Marriman's Vandal. Placing after the first three boats were Jack Woodward's Puff, Peter Young's Zest, Ted Bowers' Hakai, Ed Cushing's Shamrock, Stan Cosburn's Wild Thing, John Booth's Umpka and John Dewey's Swallow.

Miami Also Surprised By Theismann Switch

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts were "surprised and delighted" when Notre Dame quarterback Joe Theismann changed his mind and signed a two-year contract with the Canadian Football League club.

Theismann, runner-up to Stanford's Jim Plunkett in the Heisman Trophy balloting as most valuable United States college player last season, was reported to have agreed to terms with Miami Dolphins of the National Football League early last month.

But his sudden switch stunned the Argonauts after the Toronto team had all but given up hope of landing him.

"We were surprised and delighted," John Bassett, chairman of the Argos board of directors, said Monday after Theismann signed the contract Sunday in Toronto.

But in Miami, the Dolphin management was apparently equally surprised by Theismann's decision.

"We have an agreement with Joe Theismann which we expect him to honor," Joe Robbie, manager of the Dolphins, said Monday when told the college star had signed with Argos.

"We reached full agreement with Joe Theismann concerning the financial terms and the length of his contract when he was in Miami."

AGREED ON TERMS

Bassett said Theismann's visit to Miami March 8 had resulted only in an agreement on terms. The Dolphins later sent him a contract to sign but the quarterback apparently found it did not coincide completely with the terms he thought he had won.

"This gave him cause to think," Bassett said. "He phoned us and asked if we were still interested."

"We said we were and he asked us to send him a contract. We told him to come up instead. He came to town Sunday and signed."

However, Robbie said the Dolphins never discussed or changed the amount of Theismann's salary or bonus or the length of his contract after a news conference in which he participated and expressed satisfaction.

"Joe agreed we should hold the press conference to announce that we had reached accord," Robbie said, "but asked that the formal signing be held up until he could review the technical language of the contract after returning from South Bend."

"Later he asked us to change the bonus clause so he would still be paid his full bonus whether or not he reported for the second or third year of the contract."

"We agreed to this. While we were in West Palm Beach attending the NFL meetings, he talked to coach Don Shula and said he wanted the language of the bonus clause to be even more specific in this regard. So I authorized him by telephone to change the language to suit himself."

"He told me he was completely satisfied and would promptly mail the contract to us."

Theismann, a fourth-round draft choice of the Dolphins, led Notre Dame last season to 11 victories, winding up with an upset over top-ranked Texas in the Cotton Bowl.

A shade under six feet and 170 pounds, he is a capable runner and an excellent passer. He was considered small for the NFL, which accounted for his not being picked until the fourth round by Miami.

THE WEATHER

Monday was the warmest day so far this year in B.C. Cooler air has spread to the outer coast overnight and will reach the lower mainland today. Day-time highs will again climb to the mid sixties in the southern interior but the south coast will not be as mild as it was yesterday. A few showers are expected on the lower mainland today with isolated showers spreading through the interior later in the day. Most areas will clear tonight as pressures rebuild over southwestern B.C. But a rapidly moving storm will bring more cloudy weather to the coast Wednesday afternoon with rain along the outer coast.

Trailer Storage Bylaw Raises Dust in Oak Bay

Dissent rose again over Oak Bay's controversial trailer storage bylaw at Monday's council meeting when several residents appeared to oppose the bylaw's restrictions on commercial vehicles.

The complaints came after the police department began enforcing the regulation that commercial vehicles be kept in garages or carports in residential areas.

The only exemptions under the bylaw are vehicles not being used for commercial purposes, or vehicles with no writing painted on them.

NO COMPLAINTS

John Tarbuck, 2029 Newton, said he had lived in Oak Bay for 13 years and received no complaints from his neighbors about his truck.

Stating that there was no room on his property to build a carport, Tarbuck added: "I don't think it's right to drive to Saanich and park outside someone else's home. I seem to have two alternatives — sell my home or quit my job."

Mayor Frances Elford said that council would be in a better position to gauge whether the bylaw should be amended when it had received letters from all those affected by the restriction.

"We will then be able to assess the full extent of the problem."

The complaints will be studied by council's A committee.

Ald. Alan Hoey attacked the provincial government's decision to ban cigarette and liquor advertising in British Columbia.

He said that the ban would only create unemployment in B.C. and force publishing businesses to centres like Edmonton and Calgary.

Council voted to send a letter to Oak Bay MLA Dr. G. Scott Wallace expressing its opposition to the ban. Ald. Brian Smith voted against the motion "because banning of cigarette advertising is desirable — particularly for children."

DICTATE HEIGHT

Ald. John Gault questioned council's right to dictate the height of basement rooms at seven feet on consideration of a letter from R. A. Press, 1899 St. Ann. Press was refused a permit to finish a basement room because one corner was 6 foot 11 1/2 inches and another 6 foot 8 1/4."

Gault said: "I don't see that it is our business to dictate what the height of a man's basement should be. This is a great invasion of a man's privacy. Why do we have to have that kind of nonsense?"

BECAME BEDROOMS

Ald. Douglas Watts said the ruling was made because many basement rooms ended up becoming bedrooms.

Gault retorted, "Surely it's the business of the man himself if he wants to sleep in a six-foot high bedroom."

Smith quipped: "We have no business in the basements of Oak Bay!"

On the recommendation of Mayor Elford, council decided to ask the federal government for a careful review of social agencies which start up as pilot projects and just continue.

AIDED BY GRANTS

A letter from Harold Moist, president of the Community Council of Greater Victoria, pointed out that many of the new services are helped by demonstration grants provided by the secretary of state and health and welfare.

He also wrote: "There is no prior consultation with municipal or provincial governments or locally-based planning organizations and no assurance the community will continue to finance the service when federal funds have been exhausted."

SNOW JOB

Gault dismissed the Canadian Transport Commission's explanation of why domestic air rates in Canada has to be increased as a "lovely snow job." The answer to council's letter deploring the rise in rates is "too glib—too pat. We're told very nicely to mind our own business."

Smith accused the two major air lines of "using all their energies to get people out of this country to the West Indies, London or somewhere else—but not in Canada."

Council will write the commission again asking for excursion rates in Canada.

In other business council: Approved plans for the centennial branch library and senior citizens' centre on Monterey and the Henderson Park pavilion, tennis courts and parking lot.

• Voted $50 requested by the Canadian Field and Track Association to assist Dave Weicker, 2023 Newton, take part in the association's 1971 international program.

• Decided A committee consider a request for commercial development on the site of the old service station, at Estevan and Cadboro Bay when the owner developers have concrete plans.

• Said it would not favor the same developers' plans to build apartments on their Kinross-Estevan lots.

• Passed bylaws restricting the building of service stations on the northwest corner of Newport and Windsor and at 2013 Oak Bay.

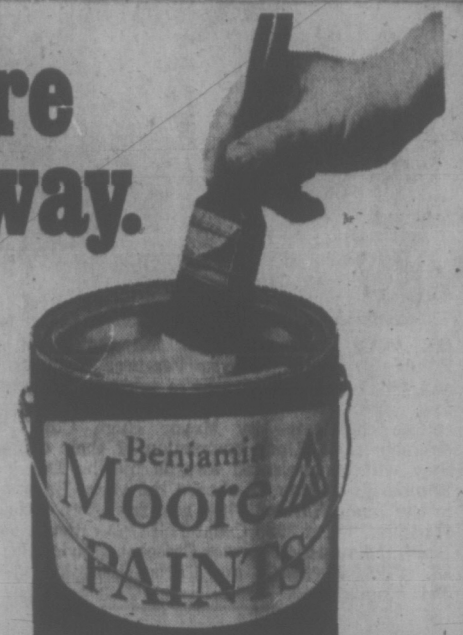

• Passed a bylaw setting down regulations for town-house development.

Opposition Keeping Cabinet Bill Boiling

By KEVIN DOYLE

OTTAWA (CP) — Striving to keep alive a marathon Commons debate on the government's reorganization bill, opposition spokesmen sought fresh ways Monday to express their off-repeated contempt for the measure.

Committee debate on the bill, now entering its 20th day, dealt with a section that would allow the cabinet to name up to five new ministers and supporting departments without consulting Parliament.

Most opposition MPs already have spoken against the clause at least once and now have to concentrate on trying to find fresh ways of expressing their dissent to keep the debate going.

Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) said everyone is familiar with his distaste for the reorganization bill but perhaps it would help to view Canada in an international setting.

For starters, the prime minister in Canada had far more power than either the president of the United States or the British prime minister.

NEEDS NO APPROVAL

The Canadian leader could appoint cabinet ministers without Parliamentary approval, whereas the president had to seek congressional ratification for his cabinet.

Treasury Board President C. M. Drury led the government counter-attack by saying new ministers of state will strengthen Parliament.

He said the power, authority, credibility and relevance of the Commons would be increased by the provision because it would enable quick appointments of ministers in problem areas and provide the opposition with an individual who could be held accountable.

Mr. Lambert said everyone with an open mind can see that the prime minister does not need the added strength of new cabinet ministers.

"The prime minister can always hold a sword over the heads of his cabinet, the parliamentary secretaries and any of his supporters in the chamber by threatening to call an election."

MINISTERS NECESSARY

Mr. Drury said ministers of state are made necessary by quickly changing circumstances which often are short-term and do not warrant appointment of a full-time minister.

Ministers of state would be appointed on a short-term basis to formulate policy with the help of high-quality assistants.

The Commons gave third and final reading Monday to a Senate bill paving the way for the metric system of measurement to replace the inches-pound system in Canada.

Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford said the introduction of the metric system in certain areas represents a significant advance for Canada.

During debate on the reorganization bill, John Lundrigan (PC —Gander-Twillingate) said the measure will enable Prime Minister Trudeau to appoint all Liberal MPs to positions of authority.

He said each of the 28 ministers would have at least one parliamentary secretary and many would have two. This meant more than 60 important jobs under the direct control of the prime minister.

FRIGHTENING VIEW

This was a new and frightening way of looking at the situation, he said.

"Members of the Liberal party are showing a great deal of fear," he said. "I don't blame them. They are members who want to become part of the establishment. They want to play their role."

Robert McCleave (PC—Halifax-East Hants) asked why the prime minister should have carte blanche to create new ministries.

Instead, he said, arrangements could be made among parties to limit debate on the establishment of particular departments—dealing with science, women or housing—for three or four days.

"We're simply afraid to give such sweeping powers to any government," he said.

The government has already indicated it is considering setting up ministries to deal with housing and the problems of women.

Andre Fortin (Creditiste—L'Orbiniere) said the creation of new ministries would only add to the Ottawa bureaucracy which already was too large. The government was simply trying to increase its power beyond reasonable limits.

M. T. McCutcheon (PC—Lambton-Kent) said the Liberals can't expect the opposition to pass the bill simply because the government was in a majority position.

The government planned to use the bill as a vehicle for distributing patronage.

Woman Survives Rough Whaling Trip

MONTREAL (CP) — A 27-year-old woman from the suburb of Dorval said she is weatherbeaten but otherwise had "a great experience" during a storm-tossed three-week whale hunting voyage off the coast of Eastern Canada.

Betty Osborne, an artist with the Arctic Biological Station, said that before undertaking the scientific voyage her worst fear was becoming seasick. Her fears were realized. "We went out in a gale," she said. "I didn't feel like eating for a week and lived on soup and crackers."

SEALED MARKERS

The 19-member team and crew set sail aboard a 172-foot vessel, the Westwhale. Eight, and spent three weeks chasing and tagging finback whales. Mrs. Osborne said that the seas got so rough after they left Halifax that at one time men "had to tie my typewriter down so I could write up Dr. (Edward) Mitchell's notes." Dr. Mitchell headed the team.

The doctor said he tagged the whales by firing 12-inch sealed markers into their blubber. Markers returned to him by whalers earn $15 each.

His findings, which are not expected to be completed until June, will be used to adjust the Canadian quota on whale kills per season.

Dr. Mitchell said about Mrs. Osborne: "She did very well indeed, was a very cheerful member of the crew and always had a pleasant word to say."

JURY SELECTED FOR CRUX TRIAL

VANCOUVER (CP) — A jury was selected Monday for the trial of A. G. Duncan Crux, former head of the Commonwealth group of companies, which is expected to proceed today in Vancouver.

The case was adjourned Monday at the request of Crown Counsel Ken Fawcus, who told Mr. Justice A. B. Macfarlane that counsel may agree on the admissibility of certain documents that would shorten the trial, expected to last three weeks.

Crux faces two counts of fraud and one of false pretences involving more than $850,000 involving transactions in the commonwealth group.

Tea Party to Hold First Bathtub Race

For the first time a bathtub race will be a highlight of the annual Oak Bay Tea Party on May 30.

Event chairman Phil Beattie said the first annual Centennial Tea cup Trophy bathtub race will conform to international bathtub specifications and will begin 1:30 p.m. at Willows Beach.

MINIMUM AGE

The course will be from Willows Beach to around At the sound of the starting gun, skippers will run to their craft, launch them, climb aboard and start engines. Engines can't be started until the skipper is aboard.

Chatham Island, between Discovery Island and Chain Islands, then back to Willows Beach.

The 10-mile course will be set out by marker boats.

Deadline for entries is midnight May 21. Minimum age for competitors is 16 and skippers under 19 must have the signed consent of their parents.

All entrants will receive mementos and trophies will be presented to the first three finishers.

Race details are available at Suite 3, 1534 Monterey Avenue.

Drugs Join Alcohol on N.W.T. Scene

YELLOW KNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Three years ago there was just alcohol.

Since then, the drug scene — and some of the hip culture that usually goes with it — has crept into the Northwest Territories to change the lives of a small portion of the 34,500 residents.

The RCMP says the growing use of illegal drugs in the N.W.T. has been confined to white youths, generally from the middle class who live in the least-isolated part of the vast territories: Yellowknife and the several other major settlements to the south.

For the rest the main social problem is still alcohol, as it has always been in the N.W.T., which has the highest consumption of liquor per capita in Canada.

The RCMP says the conviction record for possession of marijuana and LSD indicates a "fantastic increase" in the illegal use of drugs in three years.

The record, which the RCMP admits is "the tip of the iceberg," amounts to 11 convictions for drug possession in 1970, two in 1969 and none in 1968.

COST TOO MUCH

Although no drug convictions had been recorded in the more isolated settlements of the N.W.T., an RCMP spokesman said it is "only a matter of time."

He said, however, that

Indian and Eskimo youths haven't joined the drug culture because they're more interested in liquor."

In addition, drugs are generally too expensive for them, he said.

"Everything filters into the North eventually and I imagine it's going to become an even bigger problem."

"We have hippies now where there were none a few years ago. There are more people going off to universities in the south and coming back as members of the drug culture."

The proportion of white male youths with long hair now appears about the same in Yellowknife as in Edmonton, 350 miles to the south, although there may be less variation in dress in the North, especially in winter.

Jeans, sweaters and blue parkas are generally worn by everyone.

Yellowknife now has an underground newspaper, The Honeybucket, which has announced plans to devote a whole issue to drugs.

HAD FIRST LSD CASE

Yellowknife had the first LSD case in its history last year and five other convictions for possession of marijuana. The penalties ranged from a suspended sentence to a $100 fine plus one month in jail.

The RCMP said almost all the activity appears to be in marijuana and practically none in hard drugs like heroin.

Most of the drugs used in the territories appear to be brought in by the users themselves, not by traffickers, the RCMP spokesman said.

The growing number of tourists, particularly young ones, was another source of drugs and a big influence on the once-isolated youth of the N.W.T. The territories had the biggest influx of tourists in its history last year when it celebrated its centennial.

"Things happen slower here maybe but whatever the south has got, we get eventually, like it or not," the spokesman said.

Increasing Medical Strikes Seen

MONTREAL (CP) — Medical strikes have a devastating effect on both the health professions and the population, yet they will occur with increasing frequency as government assumes more control of doctors, Dr. Maurice McGregor, dean of McGill University's medical faculty, said today.

He told a meeting of the American College of Surgeons that the strike by Quebec specialists last November left the physicians "only with some emotional scars and a profound belief that we do not wish ever again to live through such an episode."

"An individual, a nation, a profession, is what it believes itself to be. Our profession has a self-image which above all else puts the patient's interest first."

However, when the Quebec Federation of Medical Specialists decided its members would strike to protest the method by which the government was implementing medical health insurance, Dr. McGregor said, doctors were caught in the middle.

"It became necessary for some of the most dedicated physicians I have ever known to tell their most devoted patients that when they became ill, they, their doctors, would not be available to help them."

"The alternative to this was to break ranks with their colleagues. Most chose the former course, some chose the latter."

ONE IDEA RESULTED

Only one positive idea came out of the strike, he said, and it was "that each one must be true to his self-image."

"Doctors are not plumbers. They have a self-image which does not allow them easily to pressure government by causing harm, or even inconvenience to their patients."

"However greatly it may be justified, strike is a weapon that our profession can only wield with great danger to itself."

To counteract the possibility of increasing medical strikes, Dr. McGregor said, both the government and the health profession must establish "a new set of binding ground rules for such negotiations."

"They would control, in particular, the release of information by either party during the course of negotiations. They would be designed to prevent the growth of rumor and of planted half-truths which in our recent dispute did so much to prevent reasonable dialogue."

"We must avoid from the beginning a situation where the state and the profession even start to assume the position of adversaries."

MUST LEAD THINKING

Furthermore, he said, the medical profession must lead the thinking, research and experimentation which precedes steps such as health insurance.

"We have come to believe in specialization, a specialization which encourages us to do our medical thing, and which leads us to expect that somebody else, maybe a municipality or a government, will design and execute changes in our health care system for us."

"This expectation has clearly been in error. It is we who operate the hospitals and offices, we who are most aware of its defects and who should be most competent to point out where change and reform laymost necessary."

Some 600 surgeons from Canada and the U.S. are attending the college's meeting which ends here Wednesday.

A text of Dr. McGregor's remarks was released before delivery.

Baby-Sitters Complete Courses

Twelve young babysitters in North Saanich are full-fledged graduates of a course in child care, fire prevention and safety measures.

At the suggestion of Mrs. Scotty Starr, 895 Clayton, North Saanich, department of national defence VU-33 members organized a four-lecture course for teen-agers.

Certificates were awarded at a ceremony last week by instructor Lieut. Glen Barnes. The graduates are Joanne Aylard, Cathy Jackson, Dolina Cindy Starr, Shirley Saville, Valerie Toller, Edith Timmers, Theresa McLaren, Cathy Williams, Maria, Catharina and Eugenia Vink, and Francis Derks.

Second Largest

The 1971 legislative session was the second longest on record.

The legislature sat on 52 days. Including evenings there were 77 separate sittings, while the 1968 session had 52 sittings on 53 different days.

Earlier reports based on subsequently corrected official records said this year's session had the most sittings ever.

People

TORONTO (CP) — Singer Pat Boone says he broke with his church to become one of the "Jesus people" because the Church of Christ has stopped believing in miracles. "The church said God quit doing miracles in the first or second century," Boone told the annual dinner of the Melvir Bible Class here Monday. "We (his family) have experienced miracles and they are just as real today as they were in the first century."

VANCOUVER (CP) — A United States citizen now living in Vancouver was sentenced Monday to a year in jail after pleading guilty to making a false statement while attempting to secure a Canadian passport. Leonard Lelievre, 27, formerly of Los Angeles, admitted that he forged the name of a Port Alberni, B.C. doctor as guarantor on the passport application. "Because it meant traveling back to the U.S. to apply for a passport for India, I attempted to get a Canadian passport instead," he explained, adding: "What I did was stupid."

OTTAWA — Mrs. Pierre Elliott Trudeau bolted past her husband Monday and bounded for the West Block entrance to the parliament buildings after spotting a cluster of photographers. "She's getting better at it than I am," the prime minister said with a grin to the one photographer who outguessed the Trudeaus. Then he also broke into a run and followed her.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "There's a real trend against drug music," says Mike Curb, president of MGM Records who deals daily with young musicians. "It's very encouraging. In times past we've seen countless groups walk in here just bombed out of their minds," says Curb, 25. "Some groups didn't like drugs, but felt they had to be on them to be more in." That's changing, he says.

LONDON (Reuters) — Britain's Roman Catholic Truth Society has come up with its answer to the little red book of the thoughts of Chairman Mao Tse-tung — a little yellow book of the thoughts of Jesus Christ. Tom Rittner, the society's general secretary, said Monday the yellow book, prepared by a Benedictine monk and a student priest, followed the same format as Chairman Mao's thoughts. It sells well, it could be translated into other languages, including Chinese, he added.

MONTREAL (CP) — A 20-year-old student testified Monday at the trial of Michel Viger that brothers Jacques and Paul Rose and Francis Simard all moved into an apartment together last Oct. 18, the day after Pierre Laporte was murdered. Richard Therrien, testifying under the protection of the court, said that Bernard Lortie, 19, the fourth man charged with the murder, moved into the apartment Nov. 1.

New Threat in British Train Chaos

LONDON (AP) — Britain's certain to be disrupted during the Easter holidays, as the deal was inadequate. At Ford, a new pay settlement approved last Friday by the overwhelming majority of the company's 48,000 workers continued closure could prevent resumption of auto production their jobs.

Meanwhile, militant workers kept two key Ford Motor Co. plants closed. They threatened to sabotage the settlement at 19 other Ford factories, which was to have ended a nine-week strike, Britain's longest in a strike-filled year.

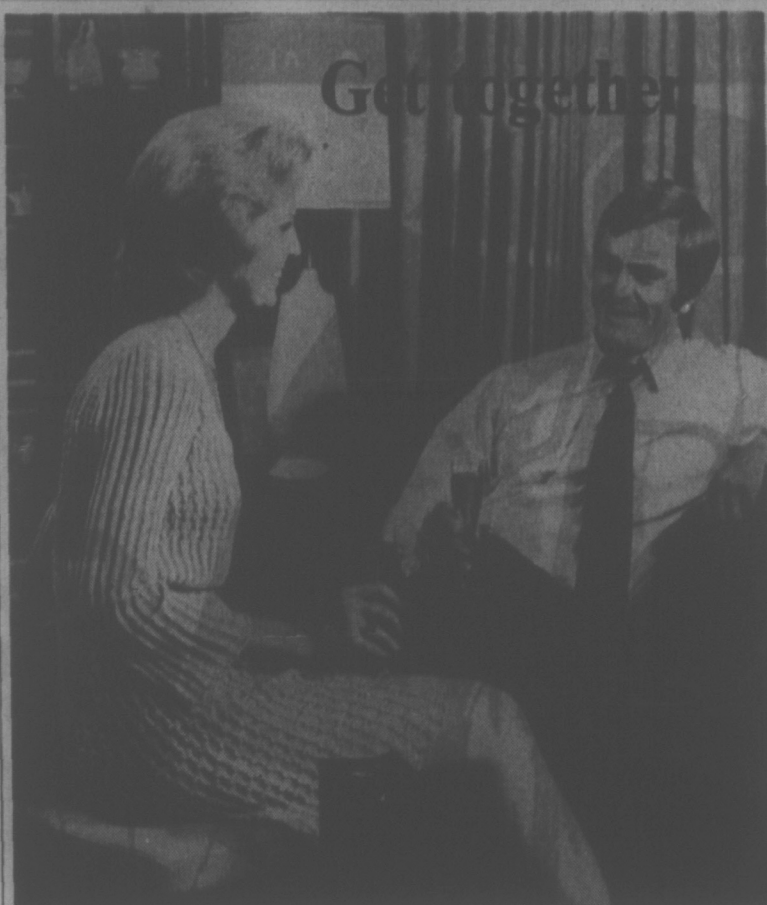

A bright spot in Britain's troubled industrial scene came from electric power workers, who agreed to shelve their threat of a nationwide blackout until another meeting with management April 15.

Powder trains were cancelled today in the second day of a go-slow and overtime ban by train drivers seeking higher pay. Delays were running 10 minutes or less on commuter lines, compared with 50 minutes Monday.

ONE UNION INVOLVED

So far only one rail union, the 30,000-strong Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, which represents train drivers, is participating in the go-slow. The 190,000-member National Union of Railwaymen decides later today whether to join in.

In all, three rail unions have rejected an increased pay offer of 9.5 per cent on a series of demands of up to 25 per cent. Train schedules are virtually

DR. JOSHUA BIERER... doesn't blame women

Noted London Psychiatrist Blames 'Henpecking' on Men

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Seven years ago a leading British psychiatrist came to the United States and reported he found American men henpecked. Now he's back and says things are worse.

"I must say I'm terribly disappointed since I arrived in New York," Dr. Joshua Bierer of London lamented in an interview. "The couples I have met make me think it's worse."

Bierer, who says men fare better in England, created a stir on a 1964 visit when he stated American women dominated their men.

Briefly, a year ago, he took a brighter view when he returned and said he thought the American male was beginning to be a "man," not just a "goody-goody."

Now the male is back in his psychiatric doghouse, Bierer, chairman of the International Association of Social Psychiatry, said he took particular note of five new cases of troubled American couples as a sidelight to visiting colleagues and giving talks in the U.S. He blames society and men, not women.

"The funny part is that it isn't the woman who wants to dominate the man, but the woman has to fill a vacuum," he said. "She really actually wants a strong man."

Bierer said the problem stems from a competitive society in which the husband comes home tired and wearily turns over fatherly discipline duties to the wife. Without a strong man "a wife will find herself escaping into a neurotic stage, bitchiness, frigidity... and the ending may be divorce."

Among the troubled couples he has observed on this visit he sees a common factor: "The man is not a man. He doesn't play the role of the provider. He plays the role of the baby. And the wife is a mother to him — although she's not happy with that role."

Bierer, 70, once divorced and now married to a woman of 25, recalls he struck up a conversation with a woman tourist and asked what her husband did for a living.

"She said he was retired. He was in his middle 30s so I wondered if he was sick, and she said no. The man does not want to work. When I asked how they could afford the trip, she said 'I paid for it.'"

"He snapped: 'I would not let a girl pay for me! The fact is that in this case the man enjoys being a baby, being mothered by this woman, and the woman enjoys being a mother to him. This is not healthy.'"

Bierer said he tells women's liberation types they are "fighting a phantom war."

"You can't fight for equality, for we are all different. You can fight for equal rights."

By RON SUDLOW

TORONTO (CP) — True Davidson may be a crusty, 69-year-old spinster, but she's never played the bridesmaid's role in her 22-year love affair with civic politics.

After leaving a host of broken male politicians in her wake, the East York mayor is courting her first entry into provincial politics on the Liberal ticket.

After defeating yet another male for the York East nomination, she told reporters:

"It's like being ready to fall in love, like spring breaking out inside you, feeling something new is going to happen."

That might not sound like the formidable female who has been running the Toronto borough of East York and her eight male aldermanic colleagues for the last decade, first as reeve and now as mayor.

But it's the same True Davidson who has been roasting the sensibilities of male politicians for so long, and with such painful effect, that one reeve was once goaded to explode.

"Someone ought to spank True Davidson's bottom!"

But the tough-skinned mayor blithely sails into the council chamber of what she calls "my borough," wearing one of her multi-hued hats, with the knowledge that if even one of her colleagues can stand the sight of her hat, at best only one or two can stand the sight of her.

Alderman Jack Irwin, one of the eight, states flatly that "none of us like her — not a soul has a good word to say for her... behind her back."

Ald. Irwin says that those who behave more discreetly to her face do so hoping they will curry her favor on the day when she eventually decides to step down.

He has no such hopes.

"I call her False Davidson. To her face. At least I did until my wife made me stop because it was impolite."

Another Toronto politician who has felt the lash of Miss Davidson's tongue is Fred Gardiner, Metropolitan Toronto's first chairman, who once accused her of "ripping a yard of skin off my back."

He is one of a dozen or so prominent politicians who have been publicly ridiculed by her, although she admits to few of her published intemperate remarks.

"Fred Gardiner?" she asks, wide-eyed. "Why, we're good friends. At least I'm his friend and I'm sure he's mine. Call him and ask him."

When a reporter did make the call, Mr. Gardiner replied with a succinct "No."

Or ask Royden Brigham, an East York lawyer whose political career has been squashed every time he has opposed her in East York elections. She is battling three-for-three against him.

Miss Davidson once told a campaign audience that they need not feel sorry for Mr. Brigham because after he lost she would personally see that he didn't go jobless.

"Our solicitor, you see, needs a junior to assist him."

Leslie Saunders, former Toronto mayor who now is an alderman on Miss Davidson's council, was once described by her as "bigoted, pigheaded and in his attitude toward women, a throwback to the stone age."

Needless to say, he is among the councillors who can contain their enthusiasm for her.

But on the other hand, Fred Beavis, a Toronto alderman who has been put down as "ridiculous" by Miss Davidson, has this to say about her:

"Let me put it this way. She goes off on a tangent and lets go with a diatribe of words, which could upset you if you ever bothered to listen to them. But I personally pay taxes in East York, and dollar for dollar we've had good administration from True Davidson."

And even Mr. Irwin has some kinds words.

"As a mayor, I think she rates with any of the mayors we have ever had in Metro. And as a politician, I think she is one of the top two or three in the whole of Canada. She is a very, very sharp individual. For sheer political astuteness, you can't beat her. I only wish you could."

Miss Davidson says her political life more or less started in nearby Streetsville during the Second World War when she was practically the one-woman civic service of that community: municipal clerk, treasurer, assessor and water commissioner.

Her political awareness, she says, began to form at the age of nine when her father took her to hear the late prime minister Sir Wilfrid Laurier speak.

"I might as well say it. I was a precocious child and when my younger sister was sleeping in my father's lap, there I was listening to that courtly, white-haired, dignified man — and thinking even then that what I wanted to be was a Liberal politician."

East York mayor True Davidson is not liked by her colleagues on council, but they admit she is an astute politician.

Syrian Women Seek Divorce Law Change

DAMASCUS (Reuters) — Syrian women, who can already vote and run for elected office, now are pushing for reforms in marriage and divorce laws.

The four women members of the People's Council — created in February as Syria's first legislative body since 1966 — have drafted a bill designed to give them equal rights with men in the domestic sphere, which is based on Islamic religious law.

One of the four, who is the driving force behind the bill, is Mrs. Suaf Al-Abdullah, 40-year-old president of the 15,000-member Syrian Women's Federation.

She said the bill proposed amendments to Syria's 17-year-old personal status law which she described as outdated. The amendments were designed to remove the impression that Syrian women were underprivileged and still lived in "harem" conditions, she said.

Mrs. Abdullah and her supporters are not challenging the Islamic law that permits a man four wives. They are seeking to stop what they contend are masculine abuses of this privilege.

Mrs. Abdullah said Islam permitted a man four wives not for the sake of pleasure but under certain conditions.

These included an illness of a wife that prevented her from attending to her domestic or matrimonial duties, and cases where marriage was desirable in order to legitimize a man's children.

The proposed law would entitle a woman to divorce her husband if he married again without her written consent.

Fabric Cut By Laser

The laser beam and the computer will be combined to perform the basic operation in fashion making, the cutting of fabric to patterns. Developed by Hughes Aircraft Co. in its research laboratories, for Genesco, the world's largest apparel company, the laser beam is part of a computer-controlled machine. It will enable the garment industry to cut single garments in far less time than it now takes to cut the standard dozen or more, thus upping the quality of mass-produced clothes while lowering their cost.

Genesco will use the system as soon as possible, but intends to make it available to all the industry. The computer stores programmed cutting instructions, a positioning device, the laser and conveyor. A single layer of material is moved along in a continuous operation. The cuts made by the laser are cleaner than those of the knives now used.

DEAR ABBY

Troublesome Kiss

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Recently, a date of mine kissed me in the ear and injured my eardrum. He caused a suction which blistered the eardrum and made it hemorrhage. Although my hearing is not permanently impaired, I have spent a considerable amount of money seeing an ear specialist.

I really think this fellow should pay for all the medical expense since he caused the damage, but since he didn't do it intentionally, I suggested that he split the bill with me. He just laughed.

I know there is no way I can force him to pay, but under the circumstances, do you think I am being unreasonable in asking him to at least pay half?—No Joke in Indiana.

DEAR NO JOKE: Certainly not! I've heard of girls paying through the nose for a little thrill—but this is ridiculous!

DEAR ABBY: I wonder if any other woman has this problem? For years my husband complained about those ugly, wooly pajamas I wore every winter. We bought an electric blanket recently, and I got rid of my warm winter sleepwear and bought myself some sexy nylon nighties, which pleased my husband to no end. I was happy, too, because I was warm and cozy under that electric blanket.

Now, the problem: My husband says the electric blanket dries out his feet and makes his heels rough. He refuses to use it, except to warm up the bed before we get in. Both of us have sinus trouble and cannot sleep in a heated room.

What's the solution? I don't want twin beds or bedrooms separate from each other. And if I go back to those ugly but warm pajamas my husband will think I'm being spiteful.—Ice Cold Katie.

DEAR KATIE: The electric blanket is not drying out your husband's feet. His skin is exceptionally dry in winter. Before bedtime, massage his feet with hand lotion. And if that doesn't eliminate the dryness, he'll be so touched with your eagerness to please him, I'll bet he lets you sleep in a gunysack!

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem concerning the meals my mother has been making lately. First she sees something in the newspaper that looks good to her, and the next thing you know, we have it for supper. Last night she made something that looked like miniature submarines. Mom said that dish was called, "The Mistake that Became a Famous Success." Well, I don't know that much about food, but as far as I am concerned, it was still a "Mistake!"

Now Mom says she is going to make something called "Stuffed Cabbage." It sounds terrible.

If you have any ideas on how a 13-year-old boy can get his mother to cook plain meals and quit experimenting around, I would sure appreciate it!—Starving in Houston.

DEAR STARVING: I have yet to see a mother who could say no to her 13-year-old son who played his cards right. Just put your arms around her and give her a little kiss on the neck, and say, "Mom, how about sticking to the plain old recipes?" (P.S. Don't knock the stuffed cabbage until you've tried it!)

DEAR ABBY: I just read your Confidential to M.C.: "You were right. I was wrong. Next time a long-haired hippie-type approaches me for a handout, I'll not refuse. I'll give him a dime on the chance that he wants to call his mother—collect."

Abby, I don't know what M.C. wrote, but please don't back down. I'm sure you must have cheered every working person in San Francisco with your first suggested reply to panhandlers, ("Nothing doing, Buddy. Earn your own bread").

I work in downtown San Francisco, and it is impossible to go out for lunch without being approached two or three times for a handout. I don't object to blind people asking for donations, or even the street musicians who at least are giving something in return for the money they get, but I resent able-bodied young men and women who approach everyone wearing clean clothes, and ask for a handout.

Californians are paying such a staggering amount for welfare, anyway, this is the last straw. Working Stiff.

MEATBALL STROGANOFF

2 pounds ground lean beef
1 cup fine dry bread crumbs.

1 teaspoon mace
2 teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon pepper
½ cup milk

2 eggs, separated
2 (10-ounce) cans consommé

6 tablespoons flour
2 cups dairy sour cream
2 (10-ounce) cans sliced mushrooms, drained

4 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
¾ cup chopped parsley.

Mix together beef, crumbs, mace, salt, pepper and milk. Beat egg whites until stiff, but not dry. Beat egg yolks slightly; add to meat mixture.

Fold in beaten whites. Gently form into small balls. Pour consommé and 1½ cups water into a heavy frying pan. Add meat, cover and simmer over low heat 30 minutes. Remove meatballs, keep warm. Blend flour into ¼ cup water; add to liquid in pan. Cook over medium heat stirring constantly until smoothly thickened and mixture comes to the boil. Stir in dairy sour cream, mushrooms, Worcestershire sauce, parsley and meat. Heat through. (Makes eight to 10 servings.)

MARBLLED ALMOND PIE

¾ cup whole natural almonds
2 cups crumbled moist coconut macaroons

1 package (3½-oz.) vanilla whipped dessert mix (not pudding)

1-3 cup butterscotch topping

Coarsely chop almonds. Press macaroon crumbs evenly into 9-inch pie plate. Prepare dessert mix as package directs. Spoon alternate layers dessert mix, almonds and butterscotch topping into pie shell. Swirl lightly with knife blade to produce marbled effect. Chill at least 2 hours; or, if you prefer, freeze until firm. Cut into small wedges to serve. Makes eight to 10 servings.

BEST EVER BLUE CHEESE DRESSING

1 cup dairy sour cream
1-3 cup mayonnaise or salad dressing

3 tablespoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

½ teaspoon salt
1 clove garlic, minced
1 cup crumbled blue cheese

Beat together sour cream, mayonnaise, lemon juice, Worcestershire sauce, salt and garlic. Fold in blue cheese. Chill well. Makes 1½ cups.)

Washington Scientists Link Pesticide With Increase in Female Infertility

By STUART AUERBACH
PHOENIX, Ariz. (WP) — DDT may be responsible for an increasing amount of infertility in American women, two University of Washington scientists reported here.

The pesticide mimics the action of the female hormone, estrogen, and upsets the development of the female reproductive system while she is still in her mother's womb, Drs. W. Le Roy Heinrichs and Ronald J. Gellert told an American Cancer Society seminar.

Heinrichs, an obstetrician-gynecologist, said he had been noting an increased amount of infertility in his clinic. When he saw reports that DDT mimics estrogen, he said, he and Gellert began studies with rats.

They found that female rats given DDT while their reproductive systems were being developed all became infertile. Furthermore, their infertility followed the same pattern as about half the women seen at the clinic.

Both the women and the laboratory rats were initially fertile for a short time. Then they developed anovulation — a failure of the egg to drop down the fallopian tubes.

All of the rats not given DDT remained fertile.

This delayed effect of DDT on the reproductive system has not been noted before, Heinrichs said. In fact, many studies have produced "a lot of information to the contrary in terms of delayed effects," he said.

Gellert, a physiologist specializing in reproductive problems, said that DDT probably damages the hypothalamus portion of the brain. "It alters a portion of the brain, alters the program of the brain, so the ovulation is blocked," he said.

In addition, he found precancerous signs in the ovaries of the rats. Heinrichs said about 20 per cent of his patients suffering from anovulation develop cancer of the uterus.

Heinrichs said his clinic has treated 740 infertile women, with 47 per cent of them suffering from anovulation. This, he added, is a "biased statistic" because his clinic specializes in the problem and gets many patients referred by other doctors.

Nevertheless, he said that in 1939-1940, before the development of DDT, only 6 to 10 per cent of infertile women suffered from anovulation.

While the evidence definitely linking DDT with increased infertility is not firm, Heinrichs advised pregnant women to stay away from the pesticide.

Gallery to Display Genius of Rodin

One of the most important exhibitions of the year will open to the public at Greater Victoria Art Gallery on Thursday.

The showing of sculpture, entitled Rodin and His Contemporaries, will be previewed by gallery members Wednesday evening when Raymond Vizzavona, French consul-general at Vancouver, will perform the opening ceremony.

The collection is making a world tour under Rothmans' sponsorship and has been seen so far by more than a million people.

In a catalogue introduction, Alan Jarvis, director of the National Gallery, quotes Sir Kenneth Clark as having said that after the impact of Michelangelo "sculpture played a diminishing role in European art until the emergence of that protean genius, Rodin."

Among the pieces on show will be several that have become familiar images, including one of several casts of the famous Thinker, The Cathedral, a study of praying hands, and also studies for the well-known Burghers of Calais.

Victoria Art Gallery will add to the display its own Rodin bronze, Mercury Descending from a Cloud, which was a gift to the gallery from Captain and Mrs. Massy Goulden.

The most distinguished sculpture exhibition so far seen in British Columbia, it will be on view here until April 29.

The Cry, by Auguste Rodin

Can Sinatra Beat Endless Farewell?

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Can Frank Sinatra make his retirement stick?

His recent announcement that he was quitting show business for "reflection, reading, self-examination and the need which every thinking man has for a fallow period" brought a response of dubiety from the entertainment crowd.

The response is natural. Anyone with a sense of show business history can call to mind the unending "farewell tours" of Sarah Bernhardt, Harry Lauder and, more recently, Maurice Chevalier.

Indeed, Hollywood history is replete with sagas of retirements that didn't stick.

In 1946, Fred Astaire announced at the finish of Blue Skies with Bing Crosby that he was hanging up his dancing shoes forever. After two years of minding his race horses, he became bored. All it took was for Gene Kelly to snap an ankle in rehearsals for Easter Parade and Fred Astaire agreed to replace him.

Astaire has been dancing ever since. "If I ever retire again, I won't tell anyone," says the reticent Astaire.

GAYNOR CAME BACK

The first winner of the Oscar as best actress, Janet Gaynor, bridged the idle period and thrived until 1938, when she retired to be the wife of designer Adrian. But she was back in 1957 to play Pat Boone's mother in Bernadine.

Shirley Temple experienced a number of retirements during a career that began at the age of two. In 1950 she proclaimed her final retirement, only to return in 1957 as star of a television series.

Others have stuck by their decisions to retire. Ten years ago, James Cagney tired of the movie grind. He gathered his Irish actor friends—Spencer Tracy, Pat O'Brien and Frank McHugh, and told them of his intention to quit.

No enticement, including the offer to play Audrey Hepburn's father in My Fair Lady, could induce him to return. Last year he turned down $3 million worth of contracts. He prefers to paint and relax.

Mary Pickford said recently: "I always said I would retire when I couldn't play little girls any more, and when I couldn't do what I wanted to do." That time came in 1933, when she was 40.

No Old-Fashioned Girlie Show This

AP Drama Critic

NEW YORK (AP) — The Folies which opened Sunday night at Broadway's Winter Garden isn't an old-fashioned glamor girlie show even though a gaggle of spangled cuties turn up every so often.

What happens to statuesque lovelies 30 years later is the hook on which producer Harold Prince hangs his latest excursion into theatrical novelty. There are some dazzling spots, but sustained success is lacking.

Canadian-born actresses have major roles.

The James Goldman story mainly involves the cross-over romantic yens of two couples, played by Alexis Smith and John McMartin, Dorothy Collins and Gene Nelson. Reunited at a backstage party at the about-to-be-demolished theatre where they once took part in Ziegfeld-type spectacles, the four air their disenchantments before deciding against trips to Reno.

The big production novelty is to have their youthful ghosts emerge from the wings to share the action. Ditto doubles appear for all the other members of the old gang, represented by such thespie stalwarts as Yvonne De Carlo, Ethel Shurtle, Fifi D'Orsay and Mary McCarty.

BORN IN CANADA

Miss Collins is a native of Windsor, Ont., Miss Smith was born in Penticton, B.C., Miss De Carlo is from Vancouver and Miss D'Orsay is a native Montrealer.

Every one of the gals gets to do one of Stephen Sondheim's merry reprises of such vaudeville-era tunes as "An American in Paris," "Broadway Baby, Who's That Woman?" and "I'm Still Here. All good fun.

The essentially sketchy and sometimes mildly confusing plot-line is laid aside after the first hour and a half for an elaborate evocation of the finessed, long-limbed production spenders that were Broadway's glory in a simpler era.

Stravinsky, 20th Century 'Great', Dies at 88

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Music Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Igor Stravinsky, the most influential composer of the 20th century, died of heart failure today at his Fifth Avenue apartment. He was 88 and had been in failing health for several years.

Stravinsky had suffered several minor "arterial strokes" since 1967 and was in hospital for treatment of a pulmonary edema in March.

He was released from hospital "in good condition" last Tuesday and moved then from his previous hotel quarters to the new apartment on Fifth Avenue.

With him at his death were his wife, Vera, his associate, Robert Craft, and his personal manager, Lillian Libman.

The composer remained controversial as well as celebrated during the last 60 years, with a constant capacity to disturb and astonish listeners.

Russian Orthodox funeral services are to be held Friday at 3 p.m. at Campbell's Funeral Church, a spokesman said.

He is to be buried at a later date in the Russian corner of the Cemetery at San Michele in Venice.

Stravinsky, who was born June 18, 1882, near St. Petersburg, Russia, flashed to the attention of the musical world in 1910 with the performance of The Firebird in Paris.

An unknown of 27, Stravinsky was commissioned by Serge Diaghilev of the Ballets Russes to write the score for a ballet based on a Russian legend. After The Firebird premiere, Diaghilev said:

"Mark him well. He is a man on the eve of celebrity."

The following year, Stravinsky wrote the score for the ballet Petrouchka for Diaghilev.

In 1913, he wrote for him The Rite of Spring, score even more boldly polytonal than the other two, with intricate rhythmic innovations and explosive dissonances.

NEARLY STARTED RIOT

The Rite nearly touched off a riot at its premiere in Paris. The savage primitiveness of the music led listeners to beat on each other with canes and drown out the orchestra with boos and catcalls. Stravinsky fled out of the theatre through a backstage window.

By the next year, however, when The Rite was repeated, it scored a triumph and was hailed as a break with the sentimental, romantic past.

Pierre Boulez, the French composer-conductor who has been named music director of the New York Philharmonic, says: "One finds in it (early Stravinsky music) a point of departure for a new conception of rhythms and aesthetics. In general, the work of Stravinsky has been indispensable in the establishment of contemporary language and style in music."

Stravinsky is said to have influenced every composer writing at the time of The Rite of Spring—except himself. He never wrote in the style of his flamboyant "Russian period" again.

He moved to Paris in 1914 and began writing in a delicate, sparse, dry style, harking back to the 18th century. His so-called neo-classic period lasted through his first full-length opera, The Rake's Progress, in 1951. After that, he began using the 12-tone system of Arnold Schoenberg. Schoenberg, the spiritual father of atonality, though his writing output was small, is considered Stravinsky's nearest rival as the 20th-century's most important musical influence.

PHYSICALLY STRONG

Stravinsky's fragile, bird-like appearance belied his seemingly indomitable physical and esthetic strength. When he was 70, he travelled a great deal, to conduct. He always considered himself the best conductor of his own works and wrote strict metronome markings in his scores, to prevent "interpretations" of his music by other conductors, which he abhorred. When he was at home, in a hillside house in Beverley Hills, Calif., he worked 10 hours a day on music and did vigorous daily exercises.

Stravinsky celebrated his 75th birthday with the premiere of Agon, which had been commissioned by the New York City ballet. It was Stravinsky's 83rd piece of music.

His first score for television, The Flood, was shown four days before he turned 80. He received a medal from President John F. Kennedy at the White House on that birthday. He went on a conducting tour of Africa the spring before he was 80 and a tour of cities in America, Israel, Russia and Europe the fall after.

The visit to Russia, at the in-itation of the Soviet Composers Union, was his only visit to Russia since he left there in 1914.

After 80, Stravinsky gradually cut down his activities. At 84, he was spending four to five hours a day composing, on "a good day." At 85, he conducted sitting down for the first time. Also at 85, he suffered a stroke which partially lost him the sight of his left eye, but the sight came back.

Stravinsky was born in Oranienbaum, Russia, the son of Feodor Stravinsky, leading basso of his time at the St. Petersburg Opera. He studied under Rimsky-Korsakov, composer and orchestrator. He wrote Fireworks in 1908 for the marriage of Rimsky's daughter and it was that piece of music which brought him to the attention of Diaghilev.

Stravinsky became a citizen of France in 1934. He and his wife had four children born there. She and one of the daughters died in 1939.

In 1940, Stravinsky married Vera, a Russian-born widow who was a painter for Diaghilev's ballet. They came to the United States in 1940 and settled in Beverly Hills. In 1945, Stravinsky became a U.S. citizen.

How Long Can Hoover Last Now?

By GRAHAM LOVELL

WASHINGTON (Redder) — A new high-level exchange between opponents and defenders of J. Edgar Hoover gave emphasis today to the persistent question of how long the 76-year-old chief will remain director of the FBI.

Hoover's detractors received unexpected support Monday when Representative Hale Boggs of Louisiana, leader of the majority Democrats in the House of Representatives, accused the FBI of using Gestapo tactics. He said the agency bugged congressmen's telephones, and he demanded that Hoover resign.

His surprise blast brought a swift response from Attorney General John Mitchell, who called it slanderous and demanded a retraction, and from the FBI, which denied the wire-tap charge.

However, the speed, vigor and weight of Mitchell's rebuttal indicated, for political observers, an increasing sensitivity by the Nixon administration to the assaults on Hoover.

CRITICISM RISES

The FBI chief and the agency he has directed for 46 years have seldom suffered such a consistent barrage of criticism as during the last 12 months.

Hoover and the FBI have been accused of bungling civil rights investigations, racism, sacrificing good law enforcement to glory seeking and purging those within the ranks who would dare to criticize.

Published accounts of stolen FBI documents have purported to show the bureau's widespread surveillance and infiltration of black organizations, student groups and the peace movement.

The appearance of Boggs among the ranks of those calling for Hoover's retirement could prove an influential factor in Hoover's tenure at the FBI, especially as an election year approaches.

Nude Dead Girl Sexual Victim

RICHMOND, B.C. (CP)—An autopsy revealed Monday that 16-year-old murder victim Adele Aline Bougie of Vancouver was sexually assaulted before she was shot twice with a .32-calibre gun during the weekend.

The girl's nude body was found Sunday on a pile of concrete blocks near the North Arm of the Fraser River in this Vancouver suburb, less than 24 hours after the body of her boyfriend, Brock Steven Johnson, 18, of Vancouver, was found on the riverbank about a half mile away. He too had been shot twice.

Richmond RCMP Monday said a man in his 30s who may have been a witness to the slayings was being sought.

The couple was last seen leaving a bus in Vancouver about 1:30 a.m. Saturday. They are believed to have hitchhiked towards their homes, and in the direction of Richmond.

The girl's raincoat and one of her socks were found by police in the area of the murder shortly after her body was discovered.

RCMP said they believe the same person was responsible for both slayings.

HOUSING STARTS DOWN 50% IN VICTORIA

A lull in capital region apartment construction during the first two months of 1971 is reflected in a 50 per cent decline in new housing starts.

Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. reports 59 per cent fewer apartments were initiated and six per cent fewer single family type units in Greater Victoria, compared with a 28 per cent drop in B.C.

Vancouver showed an average increase in new housing starts amounting to 14 per cent, consisting of 24 per cent more apartments and nine per cent fewer houses.

More stable conditions, reduced interest rates and more mortgage funds to lend indicate favorable prospects for the rest of 1971, CMHC said.

In Victoria area during February there were 124 starts, down from 145 a year ago, and bringing the two-month total this year to 332 compared to 670 units in 1970.

CMHC said 122 units were completed in February compared with 353 in the two months in 1970 in the period a year ago.

There were 60 apartment-type units started in the capital region in February, 231 in the two-month period, compared with 64 single and semi-detached types in February, 101 in the two months.

A year ago the figures were 111, 563, 34 and 107 respectively.

FIRST-TIME EVER

5th Award for Cartoonist

TORONTO (CP)—Cartoonist Duane Macpherson of the Toronto Star is the first contestant in the 23-year history of the National Newspaper Awards to be honored for the fifth time, the awards committee announced today.

The 46-year-old cartoonist is one of eight 1970 award winners who will be honored at the annual awards dinner in Toronto April 17 at which news broadcaster Walter Cronkite of the Columbia Broadcasting System will be guest speaker.

Two other members of The Star staff won awards, Tom Hazlett for spot news reporting and Anthony Westell for staff correspondence.

Mr. Westell's dispatches appear frequently in the Times.

Other winners were Jack Wolf, New Westminster Columbian, for editorial writing; Michael Popovich, Toronto Telegram, feature writing; Franz Maier, Toronto Globe and Mail, spot news photography; Glenn Baglo, Vancouver Sun, feature photography, and Robert Hanley, Hamilton Spectator, sports writing.

It was the third award for Mr. Westell and Mr. Hanley and the second for Mr. Hazlett.

Mr. Macpherson, a winner in 1959, 1960, 1962 and 1965, won his fifth award for a drawing of a group of ghetto children with the caption Tomorrow's Guerrillas. He has been with The Star since 1958 and was previously an illustrator for Maclean's magazine.

Mrs. Wolf, 25, was an award winner in her first year as an editorial writer for The Columbian, which she joined in 1969 after moving to Canada with her husband from her native Kansas the year before. She has covered the B.C. legislature and New Westminster civic affairs.

Mr. Baglo, 22, won the feature-photography award with a picture of a woman attending a faith-healing meeting. He took the prize-winning shot shortly after joining The Sun last summer from the weekly Lion's Gate Times.

Flower Shows Long Time Running

By HILDA BEASTALL

Notices of two annual flower shows for the month of April have been received. One has passed its quarter century mark of service to the Greater Victoria community, the other reaches the half century mark this year. Celebrating 50 years of developing the art of true rock gardening is the Vancouver Island Rock and Alpine Garden Society, with its annual spring show to be held for the first time in the new hall at 1030 Pandora Avenue, next to St. Andrew's School (formerly St. Louis' College).

The dates for this show are Friday and Saturday, April 23 and 24. Visitors like to come to Victoria especially to enjoy this delightful display of growing plant material. Large plants in nursery displays are shown expertly balled and burlapped; smaller alpine plants in full beauty of flower and foliage are grown and displayed in suitable pots by private garden owners.

All plants shown are hardy outdoors, though in varying degrees. Some are admittedly difficult, requiring carefully selected garden spots and even a sheet of protective glass, overhead only, to shed unwanted quantities of winter rain.

Though a regular annual visitor to this show, you will be almost sure to find something new to you each year. Rhododendrons with huge bell-shaped blooms, and rhodod with tiny blooms; coniferous evergreens a few inches in height and diameter although of great age; and more kinds of spring flowering bulbs and perennials than you knew existed — these are usual fare at the annual rock and alpine shows.

The Cadboro Bay Flower Show, an annual event for 26 years, will be at St. George's Parish Hall in Cadboro Bay on Saturday April 24.

Here you will see specimen cut blooms of late variety narcissi and early tulips, together with irises of various kinds, anemones, polyanthus and pansies.

Designs in flower arrangements will feature the current British Columbia theme of Centennial 1971. With the memory of last year's display of arrangements still in mind, I can only hazard a guess at the imagination being worked overtime this year.

Both these shows will be very much worth a visit. New gardeners and newcomers are bound to gain ideas for their properties.

Oldtimers now living in highrises can relive their down-to-earth years when they too were contributing exhibits for these two shows when the groups were in their infancy.

New plants, new exhibitors, but old in the riches which come from the good earth if we are careful custodians of our heritage.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

In today's deal, our South declarer arrived at a reasonable small slam contract. After he had incurred a one-trick set, he pointed out that his defeat was due to an "unlucky guess. I took the wrong finesse." Actually, he was right — and he was wrong: he did take the wrong finesse, but if he had played the hand correctly, it would have been unnecessary to have taken any finesse. The deal occurred in a rubber-bridge game.

Neither side vulnerable. North deals.

The bidding:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass

5 ♠ Pass 6 ♠ Pass
Pass Pass

Opening lead: Eight of ♠.

After winning the opening lead with his ace of hearts, East played back the five of diamonds, South capturing the trick with his ace. The king and ace of trumps then gathered in the three missing trumps.

The question in South's mind was whether to take the diamond finesse or the club finesse. If the diamond finesse was successful, then South's diamond loser would be eliminated. If, instead, he finessed the board's queen of clubs successfully, then on the ace of clubs he could discard his potentially losing jack of diamonds.

Having nothing to go by, South elected to enter dummy via the heart king and to finesse his jack of diamonds. As is evident, West captured the jack with the queen, to defeat the slam contract.

Declarer's play was incorrect: it was unnecessary for him to have put all his eggs in one basket. He could have had two chances to avoid the loss of a diamond trick if he had been willing to pay a possible extra 50 points for the opportunity of having a second chance.

After winning East's diamond return at trick two, trumps should have been drawn (as they were). The king of diamonds would then be cashed — and, on this deal, South would be lucky: he would catch West's queen. The rest of the tricks would now belong to declarer.

If he did not catch the queen of diamonds, then he would lead a club and finesse dummy's queen. If it won, the club ace would provide a discard for the diamond jack.

Of course, if on the second diamond lead declarer failed to catch the queen, and the club finesse also lost, then South would be down two tricks, for a loss of 100 points. But surely the investment of another 50 points for the chance of catching the diamond queen on the second lead of the suit was a good investment.

THIS OSCAR NO PRIZE

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A thief who made off with a half-baked pig named Oscar won't find the eating too good. Oscar had been kept frozen at Kelley's Party House for nine years and was thawed with a blowtorch when rented as a decorative piece for parties. "We had grown quite fond of Oscar," said Mrs. Joseph B. Kelley. A replacement for Oscar was ordered.

'TALK ENGLISH' ENGLISH TOLD

LONDON (CP) — Britons emigrating to Australia have been warned by a Sydney newspaper to take lessons in Aussie English before making the move. "Pomero English is an insidious danger both to the Australians as a distinctive people," the Sydney Sunday Telegraph says. "It is time we had compulsory accent lessons for migrants."

All Books for B.C. Schools Screened for Canadian Content

By BOB MITCHELL

Textbooks approved for use in B.C. schools are carefully screened for Canadian content and point-of-view, says the director of the department of education's curricular resources.

"In general we have a pretty good control over what we're doing," said D. W. C. Huggins. "The thing to remember is we're buying a product, so we can tell them what we want."

The newsletter of the B.C. Principals' and Vice-Principals' Association recently reported 45.6 per cent of all books on the prescribed list are Canadian, 36.6 per cent American and 17.8 per cent English.

Huggins said the figures were actually supplied by the department of education.

Huggins is responsible for the purchase of between $5 million and $6 million worth of books annually for the schools. The department of education is the single largest buyer of English-language texts in Canada, he said, because in most other provinces individual school boards buy their own books.

This fact alone makes it possible for the province to buy books "from a position of economic strength," he said.

Books are selected by ad hoc curriculum committees made up of university and school teachers, principals and district superintendents.

The committees sometimes decide to commission a writer to write a text to fill the particular needs of a program under revision.

"The committees are looking for perfection, but they're aware people want Canadian books," Huggins said.

Some courses have changed drastically in the last few years. Where once only one or two books were used, students now have access to as many as 40.

Greater Victoria school board chairman Allan McKinnon said there is a danger some "inadvertent Americanization" of students could take place in language-arts classes using a Scientific Reading Associates program.

The SRA program includes stories about George Washington, Abraham Lincoln and other non-Canadian historical figures.

"It's quite possible the kids will know the name of the first American president, but they won't know the name of the first Canadian prime minister," McKinnon said.

"It's very difficult to find good Canadian textbooks by Canadians — maybe if we bought more they would get better."

The lack of a healthy Canadian publishing industry coupled with a flood of printed materials from the United States has raised the fear Canada will become — if it isn't already — the cultural colony of her neighbor to the south.

Even Quebec, supposedly less vulnerable than English Canada by virtue of language differences, is far from immune. The Canadian Teachers' Federation reported in February, 1970 that about 1½ million French-speaking students were receiving their education from American texts translated into French.

The figures alluded to earlier on percentages by national origin of B.C. texts are somewhat optimistic when compared with figures contained in a brief by the Graphic Arts Industries Association which was submitted last year to the Davey Commission on Mass Media.

The brief reported Ontario approves more Canadian texts (77 per cent) than any other province, while B.C. uses the fewest (27 per cent).

The survey found 49 per cent of all textbooks in Canadian schools were written by Americans, and many of them revised for use in Canada. However, 10 per cent of the books were written and published in the U.S. and imported into Canada without revision.

Another interesting finding was that only in B.C., owing perhaps to the availability of cable television, more viewing time was spent on American educational TV than on Canadian TV (CBC).

Canadian content of B.C. textbooks was the subject of a research paper by University of B.C. student Gabor Mate. Mate found much of the material prepared for use in elementary grades bore little relationship to the real work, much less to Canada.

Here's what he said about a primary reader entitled Off To School, part of the Canadian Reading Development Series.

"The three children, Janet, John and Anne, all seem to have an uncannily more-typical-than-thou attitude. As all Canadian children raised on the farm, John and Janet dance ballet. Their parents, tall, slim and Aryan, seem to exist for the sole purpose of taking them for rides, for buying Christmas trees, for taking them skiing, carnivaling or picnicking. The father is never seen at work and the most serious problem that comes up is the agonizing choice between the following activities:

"We can play what we like, Anne.
We can play house.
We can play with Buttons.
We can play with Lucky.
We can sing and dance."

Mate was speaking for whole generations of disillusioned first-graders when he asked:

"Why is it assumed that children will be interested in this plastic, synthetic pap — or that it would be good if they were interested in it? Are elementary school children not people? Do they not bleed when pricked? If tickled do they not laugh? If poisoned do they not die? And if wronged, shall they not revenge?"

STICKY PROBLEM FINALLY SOLVED

HARROW, England (UPI) — Two city councilmen who tied in a speaking contest decided to share the trophy — so they had the two-foot high silver plated cup cut down the middle.

Then they learned the cup was supposed to be presented to them at the next club meeting. So they stuck it back together with cellophane tape.

But when the men, Brendon Haigh, 28, and Nick Watson, 26, tried to separate it after the official presentation, it would not come apart.

Finally, after two minutes of tugging in front of the surprised audience, it split in two.

Target: Communes

EDMONTON (CP) — Ripple-style communes are the primary target of proposed legislative amendments that would restrict camping on public lands without a permit in Alberta to 30 days a year, the Alberta house was told Monday by J. Donovan Ross, lands and forests minister.

government authority to participate in financing and ownership of the $117.7 million Athabasca pulp mill. The legislation, which was vigorously opposed by the NDP opposition, gives the government authority to guarantee a $107 million loan to Athabasca Forest Industries Limited to assist the company in establishing the mill.

Triples Allowed

EDMONTON (CP) — City council approved a request Monday from Canadian Freightways Ltd. to operate triple trailers on city streets.

Earlier, city council had denied the applications. The triple trailers were introduced experimentally two years ago on Highway 2 between Calgary and Edmonton.

The provincial government said that the trailers would be allowed to continue operating if companies could get approval to operate on city streets.

Professor Optimistic

SASKATOON (CP) — Toronto professor John Haney said Monday he could win the leadership of the federal New Democratic Party if he gets support of 20 per cent of Saskatchewan's 300 delegates to go with British Columbia and Toronto backing.

Men Hit Harder

EDMONTON (CP) — Sylvia Gelber of Ottawa, director of the federal labor department's women's bureau said men have been hit harder by unemployment because society has accepted lower wages for women.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

CABLEVISION 10 LISTINGS. 7 p.m., Ladies First; 7:30 p.m., Project - Travel; 8 p.m., Comparisons - Wedding Day; 8:30 p.m., Victoria Outdoorsmen, hunting and fishing edition; 9 p.m., You and the Law - Saanich Police Department; 9:30 p.m., Outlook - Helen Blernes.

TELESCOPE. 8:30 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. Tonight Telescope offers a profile of Ken Brindle, an Australian Aborigine and a social worker who has begun a self-help program for his people. The aim of this government assisted project is to teach the aborigines to adjust to the present and retain their heritage.

THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION. 7:30 p.m., Channel 7. 1770-1783. This first part of an every-once-in-a-while series is titled "A Conversation With Lord North." He was the British prime minister during the uprising in the Colonies, and he is portrayed with supreme charm and wit by British actor-writer-director Pete Ustinov. Filmed at Wroxton Abby outside London, Eric Seavard is himself as a TV interviewer, with the anachronism adding to the tartness of the production. Take heed as Lord North declares John Hancock to be the greatest smuggler of them all, and adds: "There can be no insurance of anything while he is still active." A fine program well worth watching.

DON KNOTTS SHOW! 8 p.m., Channel 5. Tony Randall takes time off from the Odd Couple to become an eccentric clergyman who takes his pet ant to a veterinarian (ole shay Don) in one funny bit. Claudine Longet and the Three Degrees offer some singing diversion.

FIRST TUESDAY. 9 p.m., Channel 5. Tom Brokaw, the NBC newsman stationed in Los Angeles, will be anchorman tonight as the TV magazine focuses its cameras on the Klenast quintuples, celebrating their first birthday in their home in rural New Jersey.

HEE HAW. 8:30 p.m., Channels 7 and 12. Guest star Tom T. Hall sings "Shoeshine Man" and "Ballad of Forty Dollars," and Jean Shepard wails about "Seven Lonely Days." Regular Buck Owens and his Buckaroos tell you "Love's Gonna Live Here," and the Jug Band tells everything you wanted to know about "John Henry."

"POET GAME." 9 p.m., Channel 9. The magic number is 40, does it begin or end there? A compelling theme about a top performer approaching his 40th birthday who tries desperately for a last fling, and remains concerned about where his talent will lead him in an uncertain future. Anthony Hopkins, Billie Whitelaw and Berry Norse stand out in this BBC co-production with the Hollywood Television Theatre.

MARCUS WELBY, MD. 10 p.m., Channel 4. (Rerun.) A famous attorney, suffering from a terminal disease, refuses to cut down at Dr. Welby's advice because he doesn't want people to know he's very sick. The attorney, played by Gary Merrill, also is determined to set precedent in his last case. Beth Brickell, as the attorney's young and pretty wife, also joins series stars Robert Young as Welby and James Brolin as Dr. Kiley.

WHAT HAPPENED TO EARTH DAY. 10:30 p.m., Channels 7 and 12. This special attempt to update the ecology movement. Walter Cronkite narrates as the cameras move in on Earth Day focal points in Philadelphia and Washington last year to see if the crusade has made any progress. Senator Edmund Muskie and William Ruckelshaus, head of the President's Environment Protection Force, will be heard. If you're interested in future life on earth, be sure to watch.

Rail Hold-Outs Return to Fold

Times News Services

WINNIPEG — Dissident members of the Brotherhood of Railway Engineers here today voted to return to work and join the 4,000 union members elsewhere in Canada who already have gone back to their jobs.

Rains Favor Rebellious Bengalis

NEW DELHI (Reuters) — Heavy rain fell in East Pakistan today in a break in the weather which could mark a turning point in favor of the rebellious Bengalis struggling against the West Pakistan army to create an independent East Pakistan.

It has been widely predicted that the Pakistani army in the Eastern region could find itself in great difficulty when the monsoon season begins in about a month and unleashes its usual 200 inches of rain in parts of East Pakistan.

The rains began Monday and by dusk they had grounded the Pakistani air force and forced troops to stay in their barracks, the Press Trust of India said.

NEW SUCCESSES
The Bangla Desh (Bengali nation) "liberation forces" claimed new successes Monday, while the official Pakistani radio tacitly admitted that martial law authorities in the country's Eastern wing have been facing difficulties.

PTI, quoting reports reaching Calcutta, said the rebels regained control of the important Jute town of Rangpur in the north of East Pakistan after heavy fighting.

The followers of Sheikh Mujibur Rahman were reported to have used a "human sea" tactics in Rangpur, and casualties on both sides in two days of fighting were described as heavy.

Bitter fighting was also raging in Dinajpur, Kushtia

The 280-member union local that represents engineers employed here by the CNR reached the decision at a meeting in a hotel in neighboring St. Boniface.

Meanwhile, many of those who went back to work elsewhere after a contract settlement with Canada's two major railways emphasized that they were doing so only "under protest."

RATIFICATION
Their complaint was against the system of ratification agreed upon by union negotiators with CP Rail and the CNR. The parties announced agreement Monday in Montreal.

Passenger service was back to normal in most regions of Canada today. The CNR's Supercontinental left Montreal at 3 p.m. Monday on its trip to Vancouver. Its eastbound Supercontinental left Winnipeg at mid-morning on schedule with supervisory personnel handling jobs normally done by engineers.

One of the main worries in Western Canada, primarily the Prairies, was the delay of crucial grain shipments.

Monday night, however, Wheat Pool spokesmen in Vancouver said they expected wheat loading to be back to normal in two days. Ten ships were waiting to load and six more were partially loaded.

HIT OTHER INDUSTRIES
There also was the problem of thousands of people not employed by the railways being laid off because their companies depended on CP Rail and CNR to move stocks before they piled up.

About 2,500 workers laid off by the Northern Interior Lumbermen's Association in the Prince George area of B.C. are expected back within 10 days and many smaller

Colombo Terrorists Repulsed

COLOMBO, Ceylon (AP) — Prime Minister Sirimavo Bandaranaike said today her government had foiled an attempt by insurgents to take over Colombo.

In radio announcement Ceylon's woman premier said troops had been deployed throughout the island as "Che Guevara" insurgents launched a series of attacks on police stations, security patrols and government buildings.

Mrs. Bandaranaike said that a total of 25 attacks had been repulsed.

There were a few casualties among police and service personnel, while casualties among the terrorist attackers were considerable, she said.

The insurgents commandeered buses for the attacks and used homemade bombs and firearms, the premier announced.

Several arrests were made and a dusk-to-dawn curfew was imposed throughout the country. All schools and universities were closed.

VOLUNTEERS
Ceylon army volunteers were called up to strengthen security forces.

Mrs. Bandaranaike said power supplies, rail and communication links in parts of

Khe Sanh Abandoned

QUANG TRI (Reuters) — U.S. and South Vietnamese troops today blew up their bunkers at Khe Sanh and abandoned the big base from which Saigon's forces attacked the Ho Chi Minh trail in southern Laos.

The last convoy from Khe Sanh, including about 300 American troops and some South Vietnamese, rolled east this morning on Highway 9, the twisting old road which was rebuilt in early February when U.S. forces returned to the former marine base.

Some of the last Americans and South Vietnamese were brought out from Khe Sanh by helicopter just before the final convoy left.

Probe Starts

ROME (UPI) — Health Minister Luigi Mariotti sent two inspectors to Milan today to investigate a newspaper report that medical researchers tested possible harmful effects of an insecticide on 44 new-born babies. "For the time being I have no information and I cannot comment," Mariotti said. "The inspectors will carry out an accurate investigation and report back. In four or five days I should be in a position to act."

Dayan 'Prefers War'

JERUSALEM (Reuters) — Differences between Israel and the Arab states were sharpened today following a blunt statement from Defence Minister Moshe Dayan that he would prefer war to an Israeli withdrawal behind pre-1967 borders.

"If the choice is withdrawal to the pre-1967 day war borders or war, as it is said to be by our Arab neighbors, I would prefer not to withdraw," Dayan said Monday night. "War along the present line would be preferable."

He told a political meeting that there must be a real will for peace not only among the Arab leaders but among the Arab public as well—among the intellectuals and in the press and on the radio.

"I haven't noticed any such revolution in their thinking," he said. "Their leaders may be ready to sign a piece of paper, but they have not become ready for a real peace. What they want is the withdrawal of the Israeli army."

HAS TWO STAGES

"What we want is not only a piece of paper, but security. The Israeli defence forces must hold a really defensible line."

Dayan said Arab plans

Kosygin Offers Peace, Progress As New Goals

Military Might Continues

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Alexei Kosygin offered the Soviet people an economic plan for "peace and progress" today but said the armed forces also must be expanded to balance the threat of "American imperialism."

While promising to spend "vast" sums to make more food and other consumer goods available, he warned that "tension and the threat of war continue in the world."

"We have no right to forget—even for a minute—the need to strengthen our armed forces and maintain their high combat preparedness," the premier told the Soviet Communist party's 24th congress.

"The American imperialists are trampling on international law by waging a disgraceful, dirty bandit war in Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos, and are helping the aggressors in the Middle East."

"The new five-year plan will ensure the further consolidation of the defence capability of our state."

At the same time, he said, Soviet life will become "more prosperous, and spiritually more meaningful and interesting."

Kosygin said the guidelines for economic growth in the next five years gave more attention to the consumer than ever before.

Ultimatum Given

AMMAN (UPI) — King Hussein gave Palestinian guerrillas a 48-hour ultimatum tonight to get their weapons out of Amman by Thursday. If they do not, he said, "the result will be cruel."

Hussein spoke to a gathering of Jordanian professional men following 12 days of fighting between his troops and the guerrilla forces. Most of the fighting was in north Jordan near the Syrian border but there have been clashes in Amman itself.

The guerrillas reported heavy fighting today in the Jerash sector 25 miles north of Amman but a UPI correspondent who reached the guerrilla base there today said all was quiet.

Washington Protesters Arrested

Times News Services

Protest marches were held both in New York and Washington Monday and in the case of the Washington demonstration 92 persons were arrested. Both had an anti-war theme.

At New York an estimated 4,000 protesters staged a noisy but peaceful demonstration in Wall Street in the start of a "spring offensive" that will culminate in Washington April 24 to May 5.

Singing "We Shall Overcome" and chanting slogans such as "Big Companies Get Rich; GIs Die" several hundred demonstrators led by officials of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference marched 2½ miles down police-lined Broadway to the financial district.

Only incident in the march came shortly after the group reached Wall Street, when construction workers apparently dropped bags of white powder used to coat steel girders. There were no injuries.

At Washington church people representing several denominations were arrested near the White House after they knelt on the sidewalk and spurned police requests that they move on.

Some Civil Servants May Balk at Pay Hike

Civil servants in certain categories may vote against 7 per cent pay increases announced by the provincial government, John Fryer, secretary of the B.C. Government Employees' Union, said Monday.

Fry said the increase still leaves civil servants far behind workers in comparable jobs.

The raises, effective last Thursday, are subject to ratification by the union membership and Fryer feels that majorities in certain classifications will not accept them.

The civil service commission said Monday 24,500 employees will get the raise. Special increases for hospital employees in a number of categories were included and some will get merit increases within their salary range.

Orderlies, for instance, will get a 10.7 per cent increase with the salary range of $456 to $552 increasing to a range of $506 to $612.

The Clerk 1 category increases 6.5 per cent. Starting salary goes from $292 to $311.

"MAJORITY AT LAST" Premier Ed Schreyer, left, tells an election night crowd of NDP supporters in the riding of St. Vital following two

byelections Monday, NDP candidates won in both giving Schreyer a three-seat majority in the 57-seat legislature. (CP Wirephoto)

Schreyer's NDP Wins Majority

Times News Services

WINNIPEG — Premier Ed Schreyer's NDP government stole two seats from the opposition Monday, giving it a majority in the legislature for the first time since it came to power in June, 1968.

The byelection victories in the greater Winnipeg constituency of St. Vital and in rural Ste. Rose raised the prospect of cooler days ahead for the torrid Manitoba political scene.

A triumphant Premier Schreyer told cheering party supporters in St. Vital that unless forced into a general election "we will go the full term" thus squelching speculation that he would follow up successful byelection bids with a general election call. But the premier who has frequently declared he would not call a general election until a four-year term or until he is defeated in the house added:

"If a general election were forced upon us we would win from 40 to 45 seats."

Jim Walding, a 33-year-old politician won the St. Vital seat with a 290-vote majority over a Liberal challenger. He lost by a narrow margin to a Conservative in 1968. The Conservative member later left the province and resigned his seat.

In Ste. Rose Pete Adam a 56-year-old rancher and businessman ended 44 years of Liberal domination with his victory. For the last 17 years the Western Manitoba constituency was represented by ex-Liberal leader Gil Molgat whose appointment to the Senate last October created the vacancy.

NO PERMIT, NO PROSECUTION

Pollution Board Admits Loophole

The Pollution Control Board has admitted it cannot take action against a company for pollution spills unless the firm is under permit with the board.

PCB director W. N. Venables made the statement in regard to complaints that Kaiser Resources is dumping millions of gallons of effluent into streams in the East Kootenays.

Effluent containing ammonia, phenols and coal solids has escaped into either Elk River or Michel Creek from three Kaiser facilities.

Kaiser, Venables said, has had several applications for permits turned down for various technical and legal reasons.

"It's a ludicrous situation — yes — that is what we have been saying all the time," said Mallard. "You can't blame the pollution branch, as all they can do is to administer the Act."

Mallard said the society even offered Lands Minister Ray Williston to send a team of experts to make an ecological survey at Houston, near Smithers, before a pulp mill starts operation.

"The answer was — no," he said. "We asked the company to make a survey. The answer was — no."

He said the study could have been undertaken by university graduates under the federal youth assistance program.

Mallard said the act should be amended obliging a company to make a survey before allowing it to go into operation.

"As things stand now a company can register with the Pollution-Control Board, and start operating," he said. "It may take years before the pollution branch can get around to it."

President's treatment of profs 'obvious threat' to tenure procedures at Uvic

A Canadian Association of University Teachers report on the current contract and tenure dispute involving three faculty at the University of Victoria is harshly critical of president Bruce Partridge, the Times has learned.

The 23-page report of the academic freedom and tenure committee, adopted by the CAUT executive April 3, is the basis on which the executive recommended censure of Uvic.

Officially scheduled for release Wednesday morning, the document deals exhaustively with details of procedures and negotiations in the cases of two assistant professors denied tenure and a lecturer denied promotion and tenure.

Dr. Tikan Jain of the William Goode of English and Toby Graff of philosophy all appealed their cases to the CAUT in the winter of 1968-70. Their cases have been the central issue in continuing student and faculty upheavals at Uvic since Christmas of this year.

The report is consistently critical of Partridge for refusing to give the three men involved reasons for his decisions or any opportunity to defend themselves from those reasons.

It charges that Partridge's treatment of the men constitutes "an obvious threat to the working of academic appointment committees at the University of Victoria."

In all three cases, the report says, the university reversed favorable decisions for the faculty members from elected committees designed especially to make recommendations on issues of tenure and promotion.

Although Jain had negative recommendation from his department colleagues, the faculty advisory committee recommended tenure "in the full knowledge of all the elements in the case."

But the president reversed the decision of the advisory committee.

"We must therefore conclude that President Partridge in reversing the decision of the Faculty Advisory Committee was setting his executive authority in opposition to the academic judgment of a committee specifically charged with the responsibility for tenure decisions.

"In so doing President Partridge has not only worked an injustice on Professor Jain, but has also threatened the rights of all faculty members at the University of Victoria by usurping a decision that belongs properly to an elected tenure committee."

"A university president exercises his authority in a wide range of matters; but he exercises it improperly when he reverses (without appeal) a decision from an academic appointment and tenure committee."

The report says that when a president disagrees with the findings of such a committee, he should appoint an impartial external tribunal to hear the matter.

Partridge has repeatedly rejected the CAUT recommendation for an impartial tribunal during the past two months of negotiations on the three cases.

Dr. Goede's case is similar to that of Dr. Jain, the report says, except that the English professor had even more favorable recommendations.

He was recommended by a five to one vote in his departmental committee, and by the faculty advisory committee. The dean of arts and science, Dr. John Climenhaga, however, recommended against tenure.

Partridge again reversed the decisions of the two committees, later telling the CAUT the five to one vote at the departmental level was only "a narrow margin" of support.

"Professor Goede was denied tenure without being offered reasons for the decision, and without being afforded the opportunity to speak to those reasons before a final decision was made," the report says.

"The critical issue is the same as that in the Jain case, namely that the President took it upon himself to reverse the decision of an elected committee charged with the responsibility for tenure decisions and gave the faculty member involved no mechanism to appeal the reversal."

"The treatment of Professor Goede is an obvious threat to the working of academic appointment committees at the University of Victoria."

Philosophy lecturer Toby Graff also had strong support from his department, from the chairman of the department, and from the university review committee, but again favorable recommendations were reversed, the report says.

"On 16 October, Mr. Graff wrote to President Partridge requesting the reasons for the denial of promotion. On 30 October, President Partridge replied: 'I would be glad to arrange for you to meet with your department chairman, your Dean, and me, to discuss me, but I still do not know the reasons for it.' Accordingly I do not wish therapy, just an explanation."

Graff's case is relatively simple, the report says: "His department believes that he should be promoted and has twice so recommended unanimously."

"On 10 November, Mr. Graff replied to President Partridge: 'I am quite familiar with my 'reactions' to the decision not to promote

SMITH RESIGNS

The associate dean of arts and science at the University of Victoria confirmed this morning that he has submitted his resignation to president Bruce Partridge.

Dr. Peter Smith, formerly chairman of the Classics department, told the Times of his resignation from the administrative post in a telephone interview this morning. "Because the rumor appears to be spreading on and off the campus I feel required, regrettably, to confirm the fact that I have submitted my resignation as associate dean of arts and science."

"This resignation was offered to the president and the board of governors on Sunday, April 4, but will not be received by the board until their next meeting scheduled for Monday, April 19. Until that time at least I feel that I should make no further comment," Dr. Smith said.

THE TOOLS AREN'T THE BEST, but Cool-Aid volunteers are convinced they can make a worthwhile project out of a farm they plan to operate in Saanich this year. The municipality leased them three acres of land for $1 Monday night, and after trying it out with a fractured shovel today Cool-Aid worker Steven Matthews, 20, thinks it's workable land. The youth organization now is seeking donations of used tools and equipment which can be repaired. See story on Page 2. (Bill Halkett photo.)

Mayor's Smiles Burns Ex-Fireman

Fired fireman Dale Kuster is upset because the mayor waves at him.

Kuster is in the seventh day of his last stand against the Saanich fire department and union, picketing the fire hall from which he was dismissed June 30.

"I mean, you know, when I'm out there picketing, and the mayor drives by on his way to the hall, and he smiles and waves, I get the feeling he's failing his obligation to the ratepayers," Kuster said today.

Kuster, 25, was told he was fired because he wears glasses, an acceptable impediment for a firefighter. He was told he could do the job if he wore contact lenses, so he tried them. He was dismissed after he went back to standard glasses.

"I mean, you know, the chief (Joe Sutherland) wears glasses, and he hasn't been fired."

Mayor Hugh Curtis said Kuster could have the meeting he wants with personnel director Bill Locker "any day he likes." But the mayor found it "strange" that Kuster started picketing the fire hall only after he had been away from his job nine months.

"It reduces his credibility," said Curtis.

About the smiling and waving: "It's just a friendly gesture, from one human being to another. What's a person supposed to do, ignore him?"

Men Land In Hot Water After Swim

A drinking bout with an unexpected swim off the Dallas Road breakwater Monday afternoon brought fines for two men and a jail sentence for a third today.

Judge William Ostler fined Michael Hill, 21, of 1354 Pandora, and Elmer Graham, 40, of 550 Johnson, $25 each and sentenced Jack McGrath, 56, of 138 Dallas, to 15 days in jail.

They had pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance.

McGrath asked the judge if he could be sent to jail for 30 days to straighten out.

"My ribs are cracked and my chest is bothering me," he said.

Ostler said McGrath "seems to have written his own prescription and from the look of him it's a pretty good one."

Prosecutor John Macintyre said police received a report about 4:30 p.m. Monday that two men had fallen off the breakwater.

CRASH KILLS VICTORIA MAN

A Victoria driver was killed and his two passengers seriously injured when their northbound car slammed head-on into a steel bridge abutment on the Trans-Canada Highway north of Ladysmith Monday night.

David Robert Anderson, 20, of 1135 Catherine St., Victoria, was killed instantly.

His two passengers, in critical condition in Nanaimo General Hospital with multiple fractures and internal injuries, were Roger Leslie Dyer, 27, of 959 Balmoral St., Victoria, and a Winnipeg youth.

The crash occurred at 7:15 p.m. at the Haslam Creek Bridge. Nanaimo RCMP are investigating.

A VICTORIA WOMAN whose husband died in late February called on me the other day. She was both sad and angry.

"Frank's death was a terrible blow," she said. "It still is, but I've been doing my best to face up to the prospect of life without him. Then I got this in my mail."

"This" was an obituary notice, printed in plastic and accompanied by a printed slip which carried the name and address of a New Brunswick supplier.

"We hope, you will be pleased with the enclosed Memorial Obituary which has been prepared for your consideration," the blurb runs in part. "Should you like it and desire to keep it, just send $1 in the enclosed envelope. We will also be glad to make up a additional memorials for friends, relatives and other members of the family..."

Neither the unsolicited token nor the unctuous screech that goes with it brought the slightest comfort to the woman who received it. She regards the pitch as a peculiarly coldblooded attempt to cash in on death and grief.

This gimmick is but one of the devices employed by those who would extract money from the bereaved. One in particular is an outright racket. Here's how it works:

A woman recently widowed receives a set of books or some other merchandise assertedly ordered by her husband from a distant city. The bill presented is of dismaying size. She doesn't remember any such purchase, and can find no record of it among her husband's effects. But she sends off a money order, and the chances are that some pirate who uses the mails to defraud has added another victim to his score.

A call to Better Business Bureau or police might have saved her a bliking and perhaps started some con artist toward his come-uppance.

By BOB MITCHELL

Students looking for summer jobs will find a "dearth of opportunities" to earn money, Victoria Manpower manager George Bevis said today.

Bevis made his remarks as the local Manpower branch announced more than 15,000 local high school and university students will be released from studies during May and June.

How many will seek jobs is not known, but it's certain there won't be enough jobs to go around.

Manpower asked four school boards in the Capital Region to submit numbers of students in various grades. The totals include students from Greater Victoria, Sooke, Saanich and Gulf Islands school districts.

Grade 9, 3,619, grade 10, 3,458, grade 11, 3,191, grade 12, 2,845 for a total of 13,113.

From the University of Victoria come these figures on the number of resident students: first year 852, second 707, third 490, fourth 350, fifth 88. Total 2,587.

AVOID CONFLICT

Across Canada some 1.8 million students — including 400,000 university undergraduates — will be released from studies. The federal government's $57.8 million Opportunities for Youth program announced March 16 represents an attempt to deal with all the extra people and prevent them from competing for jobs with unemployed members of the permanent work force.

students still remember the bleak employment situation last year when 45,000 undergraduates did not find summer work, according to a Canadian Press survey.

Of those who did, 30 per cent were employed by the federal or provincial governments, and earnings averaged $360 per student.

Oak Bay municipal council has applied for an $83,000 grant under the local initiative job-creating plan, and hopes to employ 32 students.

Greater Victoria school board has applied for $33,638 for building adventure playgrounds at some elementary schools.

Victoria, Saanich and the Uvic Alma Mater Society also plan to make applications.

Bevis said the criteria by which proposals will be considered include cost, number of students who would be employed, practicability and regional distribution of job opportunities.

Applicants will be notified direct by the secretary of state's department.

Bevis said construction — a labor-intensive industry — is the best indicator of the employment situation, and while the number of building permits taken out is up, many of the permits are for apartment buildings, which means construction will not necessarily start immediately.

Arthur Mayse...

Last week brought us a couple of junior house guests.

Their names are Dean and Kevin, they live in Vernon, and they came to Victoria with about 70 other seventh-graders on an inter-school junket.

The weekend program laid on by the host school kept them busy. They cruised Esquimalt harbor. They looked in at several Victoria tourist attractions. With the rest of their group, they peered at the moon through Dominion Astrophysical Observatory's big eye.

On Sunday morning, Kevin and Dean added some beach shells and damp starfish to their luggage, then set off for home. But before they left, they gave us a little pottery container of Okanagan honey.

The pot, they explained, was one of a batch "made in Vernon as gifts to the Victoria families that billeted students."

A pleasant gesture, and an appreciated souvenir that demonstrates sound thinking on somebody's part. Which brings me to a couple of questions.

Why don't we see more authentic, inexpensive, Victoria-crafted souvenirs, and fewer imports masquerading as such? Or is it just that I haven't looked hard enough and in the right places for locally-made gifts with which to speed the parting guest?

If you know of any, I'd like to hear about 'em.

We don't often deal in lost-and-found in this corner. But Donnie, a two-year-old shaggy poodle, went missing from a car on the dogwood ferry Queen of Victoria on Tuesday, March 30, and his young owner's health may depend on his return.

Donnie, a cross between miniature and toy poodles, was in the nature of a "get well" present to a girl who had suffered an emotional breakdown. He was then a pup, and his cheerful presence helped his mistress through a difficult recovery.

They have been constant companions since. This is a much-loved dog.

When the ferry sailed from Tsawwassen at noon, Donnie was in a car, leashed, but with a window left partly open. Between check-ups, he apparently slipped his collar and scrambled out to the car deck. Ferry personnel scoured the ship for him, but he hasn't been seen since.

His owner is grieving herself sick over the loss of her friend. Her mother fears a return of her daughter's former trouble.

Daughter and mother believe some ferry passenger may have found Donnie (grey muzzle and hair over his eyes) and taken him in charge.

Anyone who can furnish a clue to his whereabouts has but to give me a shout.

That's it, except to quote the message glimpsed by a friend on the back of what he describes as a hippy bus with Arizona plates:

"Support your local planet."

And why not? Our misused earth has supported mankind for countless years with damn little in return!

That Darned Elusive Flu Bug

Sorry all you hypochondriacs — but there's just no flu epidemic in Greater Victoria. Not yet, anyway.

But the influenza virus which is present appears to make its victims sicker than usual, with high fevers and stays in bed running up to two weeks or longer.

High school absenteeism is quite a sensitive indicator in such matters, Dr. A. A. Larsen, provincial epidemiologist, said today.

A check of four Greater Victoria high schools shows the usual absentee rate for this time of year of only a slight increase. Of three major businesses checked — Woodward's, The Bay and Eatons — only at Eatons there was an above-average number of staff away with flu the suspected cause.

Larsen said that when flu outbreaks occur he generally gets a rapid indication from medical health officers calling him. Two did call about three weeks ago but it's been quiet since.

The flu bug circulating this year has been identified as a virus strain labeled "B." The virus which circulated last year was the so-called Hong Kong variant of A2.

The "B" strain hasn't been around for a number of years, said Larsen, so it's likely there are quite a few people who don't have much immunity to it.

Meanwhile, St. Joseph's Hospital is asking visitors to "use a little discretion." For the protection of patients, people who have flu signs or a cold are asked to stay away until they clear up.

President's treatment of profs 'obvious threat' to tenure procedures at Uvic

A Canadian Association of University Teachers report on the current contract and tenure dispute involving three faculty at the University of Victoria is harshly critical of president Bruce Partridge, the Times has learned.

The 23-page report of the academic freedom and tenure committee, adopted by the CAUT executive April 3, is the basis on which the executive recommended censure of Uvic.

Officially scheduled for release Wednesday morning, the document deals exhaustively with details of procedures and negotiations in the cases of two assistant professors denied tenure and a lecturer denied promotion and tenure.

Dr. Tikam Jain of the chemistry department, Dr. William Goede of English and Toby Graff of philosophy all appealed their cases to the CAUT in the winter of 1968-70. Their cases have been the central issue in continuing student and faculty upheavals at Uvic since Christmas of last year.

The report is consistently critical of Partridge for refusing to give the three men involved reasons for his decisions or any opportunity to defend themselves from those reasons.

REPORT CHARGES 'INJUSTICE'

CAUT Focuses Criticism on Partridge

It charges that Partridge's treatment of the men constitutes "an obvious threat to the working of academic appointment committees at the University of Victoria."

In all three cases, the report says, the university reversed favorable decisions for the faculty members from elected committees designed especially to make recommendations on issues of tenure and promotion.

Although Jain had negative recommendation from his department colleagues, the faculty advisory committee recommended tenure "in the full knowledge of all the elements in the case."

But the president reversed the decision of the advisory committee.

"We must therefore conclude that President Partridge in reversing the decision of the Faculty Advisory Committee was setting his executive authority in opposition to the academic judgment of a committee specifically charged with the responsibility for tenure decisions.

"In so doing President Partridge has not only worked an injustice on Professor Jain, but has also threatened the rights of all faculty members at the University of Victoria by usurping a decision that belongs properly to an elected tenure committee."

"A university president exercises his authority in a wide range of matters; but he exercises it improperly when he reverses (without appeal) a decision from an academic appointment and tenure committee."

The report says that when a president disagrees with the findings of such a committee, he should appoint an impartial external tribunal to hear the matter.

Partridge has repeatedly rejected the CAUT recommendation for an impartial tribunal during the past two months of negotiations on the three cases.

Dr. Goede's case is similar to that of Dr. Jain, the report says, except that the English professor had even more favorable recommendations.

He was recommended by a five to one vote in his departmental committee, and by the faculty advisory committee. The dean of arts and science, Dr. John Chimenhaga, however, recommended against tenure.

Partridge again reversed the decisions of the two committees, later telling the CAUT the five to one vote at the departmental level was only "a narrow margin" of support.

"Professor Goede was denied tenure without being offered reasons for the decision, and without being afforded the opportunity to speak to those reasons before a final decision was made," the report says.

The critical issue is the same as that in the Jain case, namely that the President look it upon himself to reverse the decision of an elected committee charged with the responsibility for tenure decisions and gave the faculty member involved no mechanism to appeal the reversal.

"The treatment of Professor Goede is an obvious threat to the working of academic appointment committees at the University of Victoria."

Philosophy lecturer Toby Graff also had strong support from his department, from the chairman of the department, and from the university review committees, but again favorable recommendations were reversed, the report says.

"On 16 October, Mr. Graff wrote to President Partridge requesting the reasons for the denial of promotion. On 30 October, President Partridge replied: 'I would be glad to arrange for you to meet with your department chairman, your Dean, and me, to discuss me, but I still do not know the reasons for it. Accordingly I do not wish therapy, just an explanation.'"

Graff's case is relatively simple, the report says: "His department believes that he should be promoted and has twice so recommended unanimously."

"On 10 November, Mr. Graff replied to President Partridge: 'I am quite familiar with my reactions to the decision not to promote me, but I still do not know the reasons for it. Accordingly I do not wish therapy, just an explanation.'"

SMITH RESIGNS

The associate dean of arts and science at the University of Victoria confirmed this morning that he has submitted his resignation to president Bruce Partridge.

Dr. Peter Smith, formerly chairman of the Classics department, told the Times of his resignation from the administrative post in a telephone interview this morning. "Because the rumor appears to be spreading on and off the campus I feel required, regrettably, to confirm the fact that I have submitted my resignation as associate dean of arts and science."

"This resignation was offered to the president and the board of governors on Sunday, April 4, but will not be received by the board until their next meeting scheduled for Monday, April 19. Until that time at least I feel that I should make no further comment," Dr. Smith said.

THE TOOLS AREN'T THE BEST, but Cool-Aid volunteers are convinced they can make a worthwhile project out of a farm they plan to operate in Saanich this year. The municipality leased them three acres of land for $1 Monday night, and after trying it

Mayor's Smiles Burn Ex-Fireman

Fired fireman Dale Kuster is upset because the mayor waves at him.

Kuster is in the seventh day of his last stand against the Saanich fire department and union, picketing the fire hall from which he was dismissed June 30.

"I mean, you know, when I'm out there picketing, and the mayor drives by on his way to the hall, and he smiles and waves, I get the feeling he's failing his obligation to the ratepayers," Kuster said today.

Kuster, 25, was told he was fired because he wears glasses, an acceptable impediment for a firefighter. He was told he could do the job if he wore contact lenses, so he tried them. He was dismissed after he went back to standard glasses.

"I mean, you know, the chief (Joe Sutherland) wears glasses, and he hasn't been fired."

Mayor Hugh Curtis said Kuster could have the meeting he wants with personnel director Bill Locker "any day he likes." But the mayor found it "strange" that Kuster started picketing the fire hall only after he had been away from his job nine months.

"It reduces his credibility," said Curtis.

About the smiling and waving: "It's just a friendly gesture, from one human being to another. What's a person supposed to do, ignore him?"

Men Land In Hot Water After Swim

A drinking bout with an unexpected swim off the Dallas Road breakwater Monday afternoon brought fines for two men and a jail sentence for a third today.

Judge William Ostler fined Michael Hill, 21, of 1354 Pandora, and Elmer Graham, 40, of 550 Johnson, $25 each and sentenced Jack McGrath, 36, of 138 Dallas, to 15 days in jail.

They had pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance.

McGrath asked the judge if he could be sent to jail for 30 days to straighten out.

"My ribs are cracked and my chest is bothering me," he said.

Ostler said McGrath "seems to have written his own prescription and from the look of him it's a pretty good one."

Prosecutor John Macintyre said police received a report about 4:30 p.m. Monday that two men had fallen off the breakwater.

CRASH KILLS VICTORIA MAN

A Victoria driver was killed and his two passengers seriously injured when their northbound car slammed head-on into a steel bridge abutment on the Trans-Canada Highway north of Ladysmith Monday night.

David Robert Anderson, 20, of 1135 Catherine St., Victoria, was killed instantly.

His two passengers, in critical condition in Nanaimo General Hospital with multiple fractures and internal injuries, were Roger Leslie Dyer, 27, of 959 Balmoral St., Victoria, and a Winnipeg youth.

The crash occurred at 7:15 p.m. at the Haslam Creek Bridge. Nanaimo RCMP are investigating.

A VICTORIA WOMAN whose husband died in late February called on me the other day. She was both sad and angry.

"Frank's death was a terrible blow," she said. "It still is, but I've been doing my best to face up to the prospect of life without him. Then I got this in my mail."

"This" was an obituary notice printed in plastic and accompanied by a printed slip which carries the name and address of a New Brunswick supplier.

"We hope you will be pleased with the enclosed Memorial Obituary which has been prepared for your consideration," the blurb runs in part. "Should you like it and desire to keep it, just send $1 in the enclosed envelope. We will also be glad to make up a collection of memorials for friends, relatives and other members of the family."

Stamped in blue ink on the slip is a further message: "All proceeds received this month will be donated to some charitable organization. The charities, assuming these exist, are not specified."

Neither the unsolicited token nor the uncouth screech that goes with it brought the slightest comfort to the woman who received it. She regards the pitch as a peculiarly coldblooded attempt to cash in on death and grief.

This gimmick is but one of the devices employed by those who would extract money from the bereaved. One in particular is an outright racket. Here's how it works:

A woman recently widowed receives a set of books or some other merchandise assertedly ordered by her husband from a distant city. The bill presented is of disarming size. She doesn't remember any such purchase, and can find no record of it among her husband's effects. But she sends off a money order, and the charges are that some pirate who uses the mails to defraud has added another victim to his score.

A call to Better Business Bureau or police might have saved her a bliking and perhaps started some con artist toward his come-uppance.

Students looking for summer jobs will find a "dearth of opportunities" to earn money, Victoria Manpower manager George Bevis said today.

Bevis made his remarks as the local Manpower branch announced more than 15,000 local high school and university students will be released from studies during May and June.

How many will seek jobs is not known, but it's certain there won't be enough jobs to go around.

Manpower asked four school boards in the Capital Regions to submit numbers of students in various grades. The totals include students from Greater Victoria, Sooke, Saanich and Gulf Islands school districts.

Grade 9, 3,619, grade 10, 3,458, grade 11, 3,191, grade 12, 2,845 for a total of 13,113.

From the University of Victoria come these figures on the number of resident students: first year 952, second 707, third 490, fourth 350, fifth 88. Total 2,587.

Rains Favor Rebellious Bengalis

NEW DELHI (Reuters) — Heavy rain fell in East Pakistan today in a break in the weather which could mark a turning point in favor of the rebellious Bengalis struggling against the West Pakistani army to create an independent East Pakistan.

It has been widely predicted that the Pakistani army in the Eastern region could find itself in great difficulty when the monsoon season begins in about a month and unleashes its usual 200 inches of rain in parts of East Pakistan.

The rains began Monday and by dusk they had grounded the Pakistani air force and forced troops to stay in their barracks, the Press Trust of India said.

NEW SUCCESSES

The Bangla Desh (Bengali nation) "liberation forces" claimed new successes Monday, while the official Pakistani radio tacitly admitted that martial law authorities in the country's Eastern wing have been facing difficulties.

PTI, quoting reports reaching Calcutta, said the rebels regained control of the important Jute town of Rangpur in the north of East Pakistan after heavy fighting.

The followers of Sheikh Mujibur Rahman were reported to have used "human sea" tactics in Rangpur and casualties on both sides in two days of fighting were described as heavy.

Bitter fighting was also raging in Dinajpur, Kushtia

The 280-member union local that represents engineers employed here by the CNR reached the decision at a meeting in a hotel in neighboring St. Boniface.

Meanwhile, many of those who went back to work elsewhere after a contract settlement with Canada's two major railways emphasized that they were doing so only "under protest."

RATIFICATION

Their complaint was against the system of ratification agreed upon by union negotiators with CP Rail and the CNR. The parties announced agreement Monday in Montreal.

Passenger service was back to normal in most regions of Canada today. The CNR's Supercontinental left Montreal at 3 p.m. Monday on its trip to Vancouver. Its eastbound Supercontinental left Winnipeg at mid-morning on schedule with supervisory personnel handling jobs normally done by engineers.

One of the main worries in Western Canada, primarily the Prairies, was the delay of crucial grain shipments.

Monday night, however, Wheat Pool spokesmen in Vancouver said they expected wheat loading to be back to normal in two days. Ten ships were waiting to load and six more were partially loaded.

RIT OTHER INDUSTRIES
There also was the problem of thousands of people not employed by the railways being laid off because their companies depended on CP Rail and CNR to move stock before they piled up.

About 2,500 workers laid off by the Northern Interior Lumbermen's Association in the Prince George area of B.C. are expected back within 10 days and many smaller

Some Civil Servants May Balk at Pay Hike

Civil servants in certain categories may vote against 7 per cent pay increases announced by the provincial government, John Fryer, secretary of the B.C. Government Employees' Union, said Monday.

"Fry said the increase still leaves civil servants far behind workers in comparable jobs.

The raises, effective last Thursday, are subject to ratification by the union membership and Fryer feels that majorities in certain classifications will not accept them.

The civil service commission said Monday 24,500 employees will get the raise.

Special increases for hospital employees in a number of categories were included and some will get merit increases within their salary range.

Orderlies, for instance, will get a 10.7 per cent increase with the salary range of $456 to $553 increasing to a range of $506 to $612.

The Clerk I category increases 6.5 per cent. Starting salary goes from $282 to $311.

Colombo Terrorists Repulsed

COLOMBO, Ceylon (AP) — Prime Minister Sirimavo Bandaranaike said today her government had foiled an attempt by insurgents to take over Colombo.

In a radio announcement Ceylon's woman premier said troops had been deployed throughout the island as "Che Guevara" insurgents launched a series of attacks on police stations, security patrols and government buildings.

Mrs. Bandaranaike said that a total of 25 attacks had been repulsed.

There were a few casualties among police and service personnel, while casualties among the terrorist attackers were considerable, she said.

The insurgents set off a number of buses for the attacks and used homemade bombs and firearms, the premier announced.

Several arrests were made and a dusk-to-dawn curfew was imposed throughout the country. All schools and universities were closed.

Ceylon army volunteers were called up to strengthen security forces.

Dayan 'Prefers War'

JERUSALEM (Reuters) — Differences between Israel and the Arab states were sharpened today following a blunt statement from Defence Minister Moshe Dayan that he would prefer war to an Israeli withdrawal behind pre-1967 borders.

"If the choice is withdrawal to the pre-six day war borders or war, as it is said to be by our Arab neighbors, I would prefer not to withdraw," Dayan said Monday night. "War along the present line would be preferable."

He told a political meeting that there must be a real will for peace not only among the Arab leaders but among the intellectuals and in the press and on the radio.

"I haven't noticed any such revolution in their thinking," he said. "Their leaders may be ready to sign a piece of paper, but they have not become ready for a real peace. What they want is the withdrawal of the Israeli army."

HAS TWO STAGES

"What we want is not only a piece of paper, but security. The Israeli defence forces must hold a really defensible line."

ROME (UPI) — Health Minister Luigi Mariotti sent two inspectors to Milan today to investigate a newspaper report that medical researchers tested possible harmful effects of an insecticide on 44 new-born babies. Schreyer's NDP Wins Majority

Times News Services

WINNIPEG — Premier Ed Schreyer's NDP government stole two seats from the opposition Monday, giving it a majority in the legislature for the first time since it came to power in June, 1969.

The byelection victories in the greater Winnipeg constituency of St. Vital and in rural St. Rose raised the prospect of cooler days ahead for the torrid Manitoba political scene.

A triumphant Premier Schreyer told cheering party supporters in St. Vital that unless forced into a general election "we will go the full term" thus squelching speculation that he would follow up successful byelection bids with a general election call.

But the premier who has frequently declared he would not call a general election until a four-year term or until he is defeated in the house added:

"If a general election were forced upon us we would win from 40 to 45 seats."

Jim Walding, a 33-year-old politician won the St. Vital seat with a 290-vote majority over a Liberal challenger. He lost by a narrow margin to a Conservative in 1969. The Conservative member later left the province and resigned his seat.

In St. Rose Pete Adam a 56-year-old rancher and businessman ended 44 years of Liberal domination with his victory. For the last 17 years the Western Manitoba constituency was represented by ex-Liberal leader Gil Moigat whose appointment to the Senate last October created the vacancy.

Red Forces To Expand

'Vast' Sums On Food

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Alexei Kosygin offered the Soviet people an economic plan for "peace and progress" today but said the armed forces also must be expanded to balance the threat of "American imperialism."

While promising to spend "vast" sums to make more food and other consumer goods available, he warned that "tension and the threat of war continue in the world."

"We have no right to forget—even for a minute—the need to strengthen our armed forces and maintain their high combat preparedness," the premier told the Soviet Communist party's 24th congress.

"The American imperialists are trampling on international law by waging a disgraceful, dirty bandit war in Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos, and are helping the aggressors in the Middle East."

"The new five-year plan will ensure the further consolidation of the defence capability of our state."

At the same time, he said, Soviet life will become "more prosperous, and spiritually more meaningful and interesting."

Kosygin said the guidelines for economic growth in the next five years give more attention to the consumer than ever before.

The guerrillas reported heavy fighting today in the Jerash sector 25 miles north of Amman but a UPI correspondent who reached the guerrilla base there today said all was quiet.

Washington Protesters Arrested

Times News Services

Protest marches were held both in New York and Washington Monday and in the case of the Washington demonstration 92 persons were arrested. Both had an anti-war theme.

At New York an estimated 4,000 protesters staged a noisy but peaceful demonstration in Wall Street in the start of a "spring offensive" that will culminate in Washington April 24 to May 5.

Singing "We Shall Overcome" and chanting slogans such as "Big Companies Get Rich; GIs Die" several hundred demonstrators led by officials of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference marched 2½ miles down police-lined Broadway to the financial district.

Only incident in the march came shortly after the group reached Wall Street, where construction workers apparently dropped bags of white powder used to coat steel girders. There were no injuries.

At Washington church people representing several denominations were arrested near the White House after they knelt on the sidewalk and spurned police request that they move on.

NO PERMIT, NO PROSECUTION

Pollution Board Admits Loophole

The Pollution Control Board has admitted it cannot take action against a company for pollution spills unless the firm is under permit with the board.

PCB director W. N. Venables made the statement in regard to complaints that Kaiser Resources is dumping millions of gallons of effluent into streams in the East Kootenays.

Effluent containing ammonia, phenols and coal solids has escaped into either Elk River or Michel Creek from three Kaiser facilities.

Kaiser, Venables said, has had several applications for permits turned down for various technical and legal reasons.

He said there are probably "several hundreds" of firms registered, but without permits, and discharging effluent in B.C.

NO INDICATION

Derrick Mallard, executive director of SPEC, said there is no indication yet that the government intends to plug a loophole in the act which permits a firm to go ahead with its project and discharge effluent without first obtaining a permit.

"It's a ludicrous situation," he said. "That is what we have been saying all the time, since Mallard. 'You can blame the pollution branch, as all they can do is to administer the act.'"

Mallard said the society even offered Lands Minister Ray Williston to send a team of experts to make an ecological survey at Houston near Smithers, before a pulp mill starts operation.

"The answer was — no," he said. "We asked the company to make a survey. The answer was — no."

He said the study could have been undertaken by university graduates under the federal youth assistance program.

Mallard said this act should be amended obliging a company to make a survey before allowing it to go into operation.

"As things stand now a company can register with the Pollution Control Board and start operating," he said. "It may take years before the pollution branch can get around to it."
